Civil Rights Men

Searchers Comb River

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UPI)—A search for three missing Civil Rights workers shifted Saturday to the Pearl River, the same river in which a lynch mob dumped the body of accused Negro rapist Mack Charles Parker five years ago.
Four boats, manned by local officers and FBI agents, moved out on the river this morning to grapple for the bodies of the three integrationists, who vanished six days ago.

The three — Andrew Goodman, 20, of New York; Mickey Schwerner, 24, of Brooklyn, and James Chaney, a 21-year-old Meridian, Miss., Negro — were participating in the "Mississippi Project," a summer-long desegregation drive, at the time of their disappearance.

THREE ARRESTED
FBI agents arrested three white men Friday for threatening two other young northern "project" workers who were passing out Negro voter registration literature in Itta Bena, Miss.
All three of the suspects were brought before a U.S. commissioner in Oxford Saturday and ordered to stand trial on charges of conspiring to injure and intimidate the youths.
Roy Bernard Turkington, 24, of Berkeley, Calif., and John Lyon Paul, 21, of Oxnard, N.Y.

ONE CLEARED
Accused in the case are Merritt Ely Randell, 43, James E. Hodges, 38, and Lawrence Noel McGraw, 37, all residents of the Itta Bena Mississippi delta area.
U.S. commissioner Omar Craig cleared McGraw of a charge of threatening to kill the two northerners, but said there was "probable cause" for the charges against the other two.
All three will stand trial on the intimidation charges.

More FBI Sent In

Bennett Declares:

B.C. Would Be First In New Health Plan

KELOWNA (CP)—Premier Bennett said Saturday his government will co-operate 100 per cent in any federal effort to put the Hall royal commission report on health into effect.

Speaking at the official opening of a new vocational school here, the premier said he hopes B.C. will be the first province to put into operation the recommendation of the commission for a prepaid national health insurance plan.

Referring to the proposed Bank of British Columbia — a bill for its incorporation is now before parliament — the premier said it was as important to this province as any industry.

FASTER DEALS

With the headquarters of the bank in this province he said business decisions and financial transactions would be speeded up. At present B.C. was about the only place in the world where banking headquarters were so far removed — they are all in eastern Canada.

The premier also referred briefly to the Peace River power project and told his listeners that the $200,000,000 development along with the Columbia River project would result in the greatest power availability anywhere in the world.

Close to 2,000,000 horsepower could be developed from the two projects, he said. Power from the Peace would be surplus for a time.

Provincial Education Minister Leslie Peterson said that "the skills of our people are our most valuable resource." One of the essential ingredients was to have a highly-trained and versatile labor force and the provincial education department was striving to give the people the means toward this end by such methods as new vocational schools.

Redcoats Won't Come

LONDON (UPI) — A 200-year-old law empowering Prime Minister Douglas-Home to send British redcoats to put down "tumults" in America is scheduled for repeal by Parliament this summer, possibly by July 4.

It is one of many obsolete laws that Parliament is scheduled to repeal before the general election in October.

The law was enacted in 1765. It warns the American colonists against rebellion and authorizes the British government to put down "tumults and insurrections of the most dangerous nature."

First Bullets Loosed In St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Violence broke out again in St. Augustine Saturday night, and for the first time bullets were used.

One 22-year-old white man was wounded in both legs with shotgun pellets as he rode in the back of a truck near a Negro home.

Later, a Negro home in the same area was reported fired on. Two white youths said their car was shot at by Negroes. Just a little after that, Negroes said their car was fired on by whites.

The only injury reported was to the youth in the pickup truck, Thomas Schmides. His injuries were not serious.

Reinforcements arrived Saturday to push to 230 the number of state law enforcement officers stationed in this racially-torn city to maintain order.

Governor Farris Bryant ordered more men after an on-scene inspection and conferences with state law officers. "I did not find much progress toward a solution," he said.

Shastri

Successor To Nehru Stricken

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—A month after Prime Minister Nehru's death, illness that an aide called a mild heart attack has felled his successor in India's leadership, Lal Bahadur Shastri.

The 58-year-old prime minister was bedfast Saturday, and the nation faced the possibility of another leadership crisis. Physicians ordered all Shastri's engagements cancelled and treated him for what they called overstrain and a slight fever.

There is no cause for anxiety, the government's All-India radio said in a nationwide broadcast.

Mindful of the emotional impact of Nehru's illness and death on the Indian people, a government spokesman reiterated those assuring words Saturday night and said the prime minister was rested and cheerful.

day night and said the prime minister was rested and cheerful.

HEART ATTACK

A top aide of Shastri — a highly placed informant who preferred not to be identified by name — told The Associated Press that Shastri, who survived a serious heart seizure five years ago, suffered a mild heart attack at 10 p.m. Friday. He said a team of doctors instituted emergency treatment to prevent further damage.

The family at first denied this, then retracted the denial. A government official, at a news conference, refused to confirm or deny that Shastri was again a heart patient.

Shastri's son Hari said "timely precautions prevented a recurrence of the 1959 heart attack" which left him near death and unconscious for hours.

Refinery Fire Battled Without Water Pressure

SASKATOON (CP)—Firemen prevented a possible major disaster early Saturday as this city of 116,000 struggled through water and power disruptions and a fierce electrical storm.

The city was without water for two hours after a 24-inch mainline water main ruptured. Fire broke out in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police refinery in the southwest corner of the city while there was no water pressure. About 20,000 gallons of gasoline products were stored nearby in tanks. Flames shot from a fire on top of a 120-foot tower for almost two hours before they were flushed out by steam from the refinery's boilers.

Firemen pumped more than 3,000 gallons of water from tanker trucks into the boilers to raise the steam.

Plant Superintendent J. Ross Davidson warned firemen that the whole place could blow up but there was no evacuation of nearby homes.

WIND, HAIL DAMAGE
Lightning caused several fires throughout the area and there were reports of extensive wind and hail damage.

Rainfall amounted to about 35 inches.
The water main broke near the city's major pumping station in west-central Saskatoon, flooding the area with about four feet of water. Water pressure dropped to 23 pounds from 100.

An official at St. Paul's Hospital said it was necessary to use distilled water to finish an emergency operation during the water shortage.

Lightning caused major damage to the clubhouse at the Riverside Golf and Country Club. A granary on a farm north of the city was destroyed by fire after a lightning strike. Power lines were down throughout the city and surrounding areas.

Camper Mishap Kills Woman

SPENCER BRIDGE (CP)—Mrs. John B. Tompkins was killed Saturday night when she fell from the door of a truck camper unit as the family started out on a holiday trip from Vancouver.

Police said the woman was thrown to the road when the door of the camper unit opened on the Trans-Canada Highway.

One Dead, Hundreds Hurt in Montreal

Storm Turns Party Into Panic

MONTREAL (UPI)—Canada's largest city yesterday counted up the cost of its "biggest party ever": One dead, hundreds injured, about $60,000 spent on fire-works and other entertainment cut short by rain.

The rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, chopped off the party in honor of St. Jean Baptiste, French Canada's patron saint, about 10 p.m. Friday.

The dead and the injured resulted from a wild rush by thousands of French-Canadian celebrants to the only exit off St. Helen's Island, site of the party, opposite downtown Montreal.

The party-goers, estimated to number from 125,000 to 150,000, jammed the 50-foot approach leading to Jacques Cartier Bridge and the city proper where they had left their cars, while police escorted them to be orderly.

Although powerboats and rowboats were sent to the island, some 75 persons fainted before relief could arrive while others were trampled into the mud.

Gerard Forget, 33, died in Notre Dame Hospital a few hours after police rescued him from the shouting, scrambling crowd, which was pelted by hail storms.

Doctors said his death was due to natural causes "no doubt" brought on by the storm.

Amputations took off some of those fainted but, delayed by a mass of pedestrians, inched their way across the bridge which spans the St. Lawrence River, the world's longest inland waterway.

Provincial, city and harbor police manned boats to evacuate some 400 suffering from bruises, broken bones and cuts in the intolerable squeeze.

The recreation hall at the island's swimming pool was converted into a makeshift hospital and volunteer St. John Ambulance members moved through the crowd helping expectant mothers and children.

Police said the press was so great that one youth was knocked into the fast-flowing river. He was hauled out by harbor police.

Diefenbaker:

'STOP STUDY AT ONCE!'

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition leader Diefenbaker Saturday night demanded an immediate end to a study by federal officials of what he called "the ramifications of the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada."

In a strongly-worded statement, Mr. Diefenbaker accused Prime Minister Pearson of contradictions. He asserted the government has accepted the possibility of dividing Canada by initiating the study.

Mr. Diefenbaker's statement stemmed from remarks by the Prime Minister in the Commons Friday and a news release he issued Friday night.

REPLY ASKED

In the Commons, Mr. Pearson was asked by Reid Scott, NDP member for Toronto Danforth, for a reply to his question of May 20. He had asked whether the government would consider a study of the economic, social and political effects of Quebec's separation from Canada.

Replied Mr. Pearson: "We have been considering the matter." And he added: "It is not a subject which lends itself to easy investigation and dogmatic conclusions, but officials of the government are making that kind of investigation now."

'MISUNDERSTOOD'

Later Mr. Pearson issued a statement saying that his answers in the Commons "seem to have been misunderstood."

He said: "What I have asked for is not a study based on the possibility of the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada" but "a study of the economic inter-relationships between the parts of our country."

Mr. Diefenbaker's statement said that "such a study gives official countenance to separatism." It lends to a movement not acceptable to the overwhelming majority of Canadians—including those in Quebec—"an importance it does not deserve."

NOT APPROPRIATE

He said such action is "a devastating commentary on the government's failure in the field of federal-provincial relations."

The Conservative leader asserted: "The division of Canada by the removal of Quebec cannot be considered an appropriate subject by an official committee of the federal government."

AWL in Cyprus

Missing Soldiers Turn Up

NICOSIA (Reuters)—Three British soldiers missing for more than 24 hours reported back for duty at 1 p.m. local time today, a United Nations spokesman said.

Fears for their safety had been growing, and search measures had been stepped up. The men failed to report for duty Friday morning.

NO NAMES

The UN spokesman said he would not release the soldiers' names and said the matter was now a question of military discipline.

He said they had been absent without leave since 11 p.m. Thursday, although last seen leaving a Limassol night club about 7 a.m. Friday.

Invasion Feared

NICOSIA (UPI)—Greek Cypriots are making plans to attack Turkish Cypriot positions on the northwest coast, reviving the possibility of a Turkish invasion of the island, diplomats said Saturday.

In London, however, Turkish Prime Minister Inonu denied that Turkey was planning any armed intervention in Cyprus at this time. Under provisions of the treaty granting the island independence, Turkey has the right to intervene to protect the Turkish minority on Cyprus.

Ship Leaves Docks After Union Truce

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Maritime Trustees set up as a watchdog for maritime unions in Canada.

Mr. Hope said the Seafarers' International Union had agreed to withhold these negotiations pending efforts by the trustees to create a single union representing ships officers in Canada.

At the same time officials of the Merchant Service Guild and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers CLC had agreed to withhold attempts to conclude an agreement respecting the officers.

A truce among the maritime unions involved was reached Friday night and loading of the ship began immediately.

She sailed for Alaska early Saturday from the suburban Surrey docks.

Oswald Soon Grew Tired Of Russian Way of Life

DALLAS (AP)—Lee Harvey Oswald wrote vividly in a diary of an attempt to commit suicide soon after reaching the Soviet Union in 1959, of his unsatisfactory love life with Russian girls until he met Marina, whom he later married, and about his dissatisfaction with Russia and plans to return to the United States.

He told of these things in a diary reported in a copyrighted story written by Hugh Aynesworth in the Dallas Morning News. A second portion of the diary will be published later.

WANTED CITIZENSHIP

Oswald's train into Moscow was met by tourist guide Rimma Sherikova. His words to her were: "I want to apply for Russian citizenship."

In his diary, he said, "She is habbergasted, but agrees to help."

He decided to commit suicide one hour before his visa expired Oct. 21, 1959.

Rimma found Oswald unconscious by the bathtub, the floor and tub deeply stained with his blood. Doctors took five stitches in his slashed wrist.

When he regained consciousness the next day, he realized he was in an insane ward. "This realization disquiets me," he wrote. With Rimma's help, he was transferred to a regular ward.

Shortly after that an official notified him he could remain until they decided what to do about his case.

On Jan. 4, 1960, he was told he could have a residence document but not citizenship and was ordered 468 miles southwest of Moscow to Minsk to take a job in a radio factory.

In Minsk, he met Rosa, "about 23, blonde, attractive, unmarried, excellent English. We attract each other at once."

He said he took Rosa to the theatre, movie or opera almost daily. "I am living big and am very satisfied."

MEETS GIRLS

But on his 21st birthday, Oct. 15, 1960, he invited Rosa and a Jewish girl named Ella Garmain and another man to his apartment for a party.

"Rosa and Ella are jealous of each other," he wrote. "It brings a warm feeling to me. Both are at my place for the first time."

Oswald told of gradually becoming disenchanted with the Soviet Union.

"I am starting to reconsider my desire about staying. The work is drab. The money I get has nowhere to be sent. No night clubs or bowling alleys, no places or recreation except the trade union dances."

"I have had enough."

Anti-Parker Penalized

BRIGHTON, England (UP)—Cafe owner Reginald Carter was fined $85 Friday because he parked outside the entrance to his restaurant.

"These cars are a nuisance," Carter said. "Trade would be much better if there was no parking here."

TB Incidence Shows Drop

SAINT JOHN (CP)—There were 5,705 new active cases of tuberculosis found in Canada last year. The figures were released at the annual meeting of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association here and represent a decrease of 419 from the previous year.

Your Good Health

Loss of Appetite and Weight Some Bronchiectasis Symptoms

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had breath, and with you would write about bronchiectasis—M.C.

Bronchiectasis, of course, is much more than simply a cause of bad breath, although it is likely to be that, too.

It is a dilation of the lower end of the bronchial tubes. It can result from bronchitis, pneumonia, tuberculosis or other lung disorders, but it also may occur without any of these fore-runners.

The dilated area permits phlegm to accumulate, and there is chronic infection and pus as well as fluid. This in turn means foul-smelling sputum, raised by a loose-spouting cough which can be a symptom of bronchiectasis.

MAY BE BLOODY

As you might suspect, the affected area can become ulcerated, and then phlegm may be bloody. In fact, bronchiectasis is the commonest of all causes of bloody sputum and lung hemorrhage. The bleeding may be heavy and hence dangerous.

The classic symptoms of chronic infection—loss of appetite and weight, fatigue, and fever—follow.

Separate lobes of the lung can be involved, sometimes the upper, but usually the lower.

Treatment includes courses of antibiotics to subdue infection, and postural drainage—that is, lying with shoulders lower than the hips—several times a day to help clear away the phlegm and fluids.

Smoking aggravates the condition and should be stopped.

Cure (as distinct from treatment to ease the problem) involves surgery to remove the affected tissues. This does not necessarily mean removal of an entire lung, or even of an entire lobe of a lung since methods have been devised now for "segmental dissection," removing only a part of a lobe.

While immunization obviously causes bad breath, other symptoms would be more noticeable than the mere odor.

However, it's a significant example of the sort of thing, other than bad teeth, which can cause bad breath. Lung, tonsil or even nasal infections can smell bad, and having your teeth fixed or using mouthwash isn't going to correct it.

Dear Dr. Molner: For the second time I am being treated for a kidney infection. What could be the cause?—MRS. M. G.

Kidney infections are likely to be stubborn and to recur. You can stop almost all the infection, and then it starts again.

Exactly what causes it in the first place may be a mystery. How do you get an infected finger? Why do some people have boils, others not? Somehow the infection got started, and since you can't look at a kidney directly, as you can a sore finger or a boil, the safest course is to give a little extra treatment, and still be on your guard, ready to start treating again, at the first sign of any recurrence. Females are particularly prone to bladder and kidney infection.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can multiple sclerosis be inherited?—MRS. F.

The cause is not known but there is no indication that it is hereditary.

Good Sitdown For Graduate

OXFORD, England — Publisher's son John Davies, 23, who was graduated from Oxford University last year, says he has found his niche in life — as a porter at the Oxford railway station.

"It's a wonderful, uncomplicated life," Davies said of his $36-a-week job. "You can have a good sitdown whenever you feel like it."

BEVERLY HILLS — Broadway musical star Ethel Merman and academy award-winning actor Ernest Borgnine were married in a double-ring ceremony at the home of the groom.

TORONTO — Folk singers Ian Tyson and Sylvia Fricker of Toronto were married Friday. The Toronto couple, known professionally as Ian and Sylvia, have been singing together for several years.

VANCOUVER — W. D. Reid, a native of Victoria and a veteran of 27 years in B.C.'s education system, has been appointed chief inspector of schools for the province. He is superintendent of the Delta School board.

VANCOUVER — Ian McKinnis, 15, and two 17-year-old juveniles have been charged with arson in connection with a fire at the pre shop of the old Shaughnessy Golf Club last May.

LOS ANGELES — Jean Crawford left Cedars of Lebanon Hospital Friday after a two-week treatment for virus pneumonia.

ANKARA — Ex-major Fethi Oskan, 46, was hanged for his part in the revolt of May 21, 1960, the Turkish government officially announced.

WARSAW — Hundreds of enthusiastic Poles almost mobbed U.S. Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy on his arrival in Warsaw yesterday for a private weekend visit to Communist-ruled Poland. He was cheered, serenaded and kissed.

LONDON — Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inönü, arrived here by air from New York for talks on the Cyprus problem with Sir Alec Douglas-Home, the British prime minister.

GALT, Ont. — Gordon Campbell, 57, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Waterloo South since 1961, died at his home here. He had been in ill-health for several months.

SAN FRANCISCO — Labeling cigarette packages with warnings that smoking may cause cancer and other diseases will do little or no good, the American Medical Association's president Dr. Edward R. Annals says.

VANCOUVER — George Starov, 16-year-old muscular dystrophy sufferer, escaped death by fire because of a household elevator his parents had bought him through careful saving. Riding in his wheelchair, he took the elevator down from his second-floor bedroom minutes before it was engulfed in flames.

LONDON — Pte. G. W. Cowell, a 26-year-old Jamaican, Friday became the first Negro member of a British army regiment to stand guard at Buckingham Palace.

EL PASO, Tex. — Ben Vaff, innkeeper at the Holiday Inn, put up a sign last week, saying "this is dairy month—please take a cow out to lunch." Three showed up with a cow and the shaken Vaff led them to a table near the swimming pool and fed the cow a salad. Then he took down the sign.

RANGOON — Win Ma Tha, 32, the Australian-Burmese actress who co-starred with Gregory Peck in "The Purple Heart," shaved her head last week and entered a Buddhist convent.

Santa Delivers Moneybags To Canadians

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
Santa Claus arrived Saturday for seven Canadians who were each $150,000 richer when a horse by that name sped to victory in the Irish Derby at the Curragh race track near Dublin.

They held Irish Sweepstakes tickets on the horse and were among 145 Canadians who will collect a total of at least $1,581,000 on the race.

Second-place windfalls of $60,000 each went to four Canadians who held tickets on Lionhearted and another five each won $30,000 with tickets on third-placed Sunseeker. Canadians who held tickets on the 27 other horses eligible for the derby—19 started—will each receive a consolation prize that will amount to at least $1,100.

Toronto-area residents were well represented among the big money winners. Two—William Breen, 42, a Scarborough purchasing agent and Mrs. Iris Taylor, mother of one—won $150,000; David Moskat, 33, a Toronto upholsterer won $60,000 and E.J.G. Moore of Toronto and Donald Hamilton of Willowdale each won $30,000.

Robert MacLeod, 42, of Glace Bay, N.S., learned of his $150,000 win as he was preparing to attend the funeral of his wife's uncle, killed in a mine accident last week.

The money will come in handy: he loses his job as a painter when Point Edward naval base near Sydney closes down in the near future as a result of defence department cutbacks.

MORE
Douglas Witty, a 28-year-old researcher for Abitibi Pulp and Paper mill in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was the only bachelor to win first-place money. Mr. Witty said he hasn't any immediate plans on how to spend the money but would take a few days off "to think about it."

LANGLEY (CP)—Mrs. Douglas Armour, a Langley grandmother, isn't in the market for a new fur coat with the $60,000 sweepstakes money she won today when Lionhearted finished second in the Irish Derby.

Her husband is a milk rancher.

Soggy Swan Sinks

Job Strictly for the Birds

RYDE, Isle of Wight (AP)—Vernon Winkworth says it's a job strictly for the birds, but he's stuck with it—teaching Fred, the sinking swan, to swim.

Fred was born into a family of swans on Ryde's seafront Canoe Lake. But the poor little fellow soon showed he couldn't float. He'd walk on the bottom with his head just above water.

Fred's parents became impatient with the slow cygnet and began pecking at him. Tourists took pity on Fred and brought him to Winkworth, who owns the Ryde Zoo.

Winkworth is showing a lot of patience. He explained: "The trouble is Fred's oil glands, which make feathers waterproof, aren't working and that's why he sinks. He'll get well in time but now he's lost confidence in himself. I've got to teach him to swim."

Prolonged Use of Tranquillizer Studied for Link with Deaths

VANCOUVER (CP) — A study is being made to determine whether the deaths in the last two years of 12 patients at British Columbia's Escondido Mental Hospital might be linked to "prolonged high dosage" of the tranquillizer drug chlorpromazine, doctors said Saturday.

A report on the possible link was made Friday at the annual meeting of the Canadian Psychiatric Association in a paper on Prolonged Chlorpromazine Therapy delivered by two Escondido doctors.

One of them, Dr. G. A. Nicholson, director of pathology at Escondido, said Saturday in an interview a biochemical investigation is being made but that the results won't be known for months.

STILL IN USE
In the meantime, the drug will continue to be administered. "We just can't get along without it," Dr. Nicholson said. "It is the only drug useful for severely psychotic patients."

Dr. Nicholson said the 12 deaths had been attributed officially to two causes — bronchial pneumonia or cardiac arrest, a form of heart failure.

"But we feel there was something else involved that we can't demonstrate," he said. All the deaths were among patients taking what the pathologist described as prolonged high dosage of the drug.

Boy Found Dead In Refrigerator

ORONOCO, N.B. (CP)—The body of an eight-year-old Oronoco boy was found in an unused refrigerator in a neighbor's basement early Friday. He had been missing since noon Thursday. The victim was Joseph Roy Muise, son of Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph Muise.

Swedes Say K's Visit 'Pain in the Ears'

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—The Swedes said farewell to Soviet Premier Khrushchev Saturday with a trace of bitterness.

The Liberal Expressen, Scandinavia's largest newspaper, called his five-day visit a fiasco.

"You gave us empty words," the Expressen said. "All your thundering joviality still is a pain in our ears." Khrushchev is heading now to Norway aboard the Soviet liner Bashkirta for the windup of his 18-day Scandinavian tour.

Throng Honors Poet

Eisenhower Unveils Ukrainian Statue

WASHINGTON (CP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower Saturday unveiled the statue site just off Embassy Row.

A number of the marchers, including some from Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Edmonton, Ottawa and Winnipeg, suffered not only from the broiling heat but also from foot blisters.

Eisenhower, speaking under a hurriedly improvised canopy, expressed hope that the magnificent march would kindle a world movement for all captive nations.

Noting that Shevchenko was a Freedom Fighter as well as a poet, he expressed faith that the "evil conspiracies" that dominate the Ukraine and other parts of the Soviet Union will one day disappear.

In countries of eastern and central Europe, he said, there are "millions of individual human beings who earnestly want the right of self-determination and self-government."

Union to Press Strike Vote For Trail Smelter Workers

TRAIL (CP) — Officials of the International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union (IMMSWU) said Saturday they will press the government for a strike vote at Kimberley and Trail no later than July 6.

The union announced earlier that it would take a strike vote at the Kimberley and Trail operations of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada, Limited. Date of the vote was set for June 30. However, the company applied to the provincial

Just a Laugh

THOUGH the prime minister can hardly escape his involvement in the "Mr. Pearson" TV film incident, the real villain of the whole piece is the CBC.

Now that this highly paid corporation (it costs Canadians more than $75,000,000 a year to keep it operating) with its highly paid help (its president, Mr. J. Alphonse Ouimet, recently had his already large salary doubled) has committed a masterly flub involving no less a personage than the first minister of Canada, perhaps some sort of an investigation into its management might be called for.

Though few Canadians have anything but well-deserved praise for the CBC's radio network, the same cannot be said for its television department.

For long Canadian TV viewers have registered complaints to the effect that CBC TV programs carry too much American content, that most theatre or public affairs programs beamed over the national system originate in either Toronto or Montreal, that too many of the TV interviewers seem to look upon themselves as character assassins employed solely to belittle any unfortunate individual they happen to have trapped before their cameras.

Then there is the matter of costs and staff, subjects with a particular bearing on the ill-fated "Mr. Pearson" show, for not only did "Mr. Pearson" cost taxpayers the sum of $35,000, but the job was farmed out to a private firm once the CBC had sold the prime minister on the idea that such a production would be in the public's interest.

A few Canadians may wonder why a private operator was used in this instance. Was the CBC understaffed at the time? Was the assignment beyond the capabilities of CBC TV technicians? Could it be done cheaper by employing outside help?

Certainly there was no effort made by the CBC to hand over the job to someone else when Mr. Diefenbaker was tackled as a subject last year. At that time a whole crew from CBC headquarters was sent to do the job; interviewer, director, producers, script-girls, writers and camera-men.

Why didn't Mr. Pearson qualify for the same treatment?

And, for that matter, what about the $35,000? Do the taxpayers just laugh at the loss or are they entitled to an explanation? It is not too difficult to predict that though they deserve the latter all they will get is the former.

Hockey Fillip

THE WINTER SPORTS scene of the town has taken a new look with the likely return of WHL competition at the Memorial Arena. Pending arrangement of normal terms for use of the arena the Toronto Maple Leafs will shift its Denver franchise to Victoria.

This of course will simply be a return of a WHL club to a city that a decade ago was a leading supporter of professional ice hockey. But it promises a revival in local circles of a winter attraction that later fell on less successful days.

Under the aegis of the dynamic Toronto NHL club one can assume the icing of a team well able to hold its own in WHL competition, and thus draw hockey fans to the arena in the numbers which alone keep such ventures in being. The sadder chapters of the last operating franchise here can be forgotten.

Memorial Arena officials have hailed the news with pleasure since it means good business for the civic-owned stadium and the town as a whole will be equally enthusiastic. There is a backlog of sporting sentiment waiting only the chance once again to enjoy the thrills and excitement of good-class hockey.

And if the Toronto Maple Leafs provide the playing strength to justify adequate spectator support Mr. Stafford Smythe will have no cause to regret substituting Victoria for Denver.

Perhaps surprisingly "Maple Leafs" will be the team name of the local club, as distinct from the "Cougar" tag of former years; one might have thought the Stanley Cup winners prized the name too much to share it even with a subsidiary. But together with similar uniforms this might guarantee a top-notch WHL representative.

There is one factor however that concerns the re-entry of Victoria into the professional hockey scene. If community support is not forthcoming in hearty fashion the franchise could again be lost. The prospect of long-term WHL hockey here may depend on the number of fans who patronize the games, although initial enthusiasm for the Toronto sponsorship should dispel any doubts on this score.

Moon Magic

THE ANCIENTS who gave us mythology looked on the moon as feminine, giving it names like Hecate, Diana, Phoebe et al according to its five phases of earthly vision. With our secular references to the "man in the moon" we have come to regard this satellite of the earth as of masculine persuasion.

Soon apparently we may know which is which, together with the exposure of other facets of this heavenly orb which shines upon us at night from 238,870 miles away.

Mankind has been fascinated throughout the centuries by this mysterious polar body which favors lovers by its romantic effulgence, puts mariners at the disposal of oceanic tides, and incites the modern astronauts who would breach the secrets of the universe. And now there is the promise that we shall be given a close-up of the like of which has hitherto been denied.

By another of those miraculous scientific breakthroughs a device has been invented which by photographic magic will enable pictures to be taken of lunar objects as small as a foot across. Not even the "man in the moon" could thus escape from a pictorial image were he in fact there.

As well as an important step forward in lunar photography and observation this should eliminate, it is said, the need for those vastly expensive inquiring expeditions sent aloft to take pictures of the moon's surface preparatory to the landing of a vehicle thereon. Space scientists are agog because such a close-up should tell them all they want to know.

The moon is a blessing the earth couldn't well do without. It should be an added comfort if the camera now shows its surface to be so inhospitable that all thoughts of making it a potential agency of earthly military power have to be abandoned.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax"

By TOM TAYLOR

THE thing nowadays is to have an image, a good one of course, and so the Madison Avenue boys have been called in by the pawnbrokers. The latter want their traditional sign lifted in the social scale, given a new look.

In this they are but following the modern trend, I suppose, where status symbols are presumed to be the criterion of worth, respectability, et al. If your face is not your fortune let your badge bespeak your quality.

And, conclude the pawnbrokers, after an awful long time it must be said, the famous three golden balls are pre-judicial to their standing. They summon a Dickensian recollection of the poorhouse and people trying to avoid it by "hocking" their goods at a pawnshop.

It was in London, you see, that the three golden balls first made their appearance, when Lombardy bankers set up in business as money-lenders.

Now money-lending isn't necessarily a business to be despised or set on a low rung of the social ladder. You and I are money-lenders when we buy savings bonds, and we don't do this purely as an altruistic gesture to help out the national treasury.

And as well you know the modern economy is kept afloat by lending, which is what those take-now-and-pay-later invitations are in every essence. Credit is money-lending. And when you buy a car and have it financed, or get a bank loan, or a mortgage, or borrow from a finance company you are doing precisely what the richest of Dickens' day and earlier did when they put articles in "hock."

The image depends on the scale, location and general decor of the transactions; of course, if you hock your collateral in plush office surroundings, perhaps chromium-plated or glass-walled, like the new architectural fashion of banks, you walk out with your head high and no feeling of social inferiority.

Money-lending in this manner is a very respectable business and the chaps who enter to your needs are equally persons grata in the best circles.

Not so the pawnbrokers, however, so they have come to think. The connotation of the three golden balls is haunting them. The sign though traditional and of equal value to the gables and patinated such establishments, having nowhere else to turn in their financial embroilments, is damned. It does not suggest the expansive high-tone nature of a modern pawnshop.

Today's establishment of this ilk, also, in keeping with the paradox of an era of specialization which sees shops turning into general stores, does not merely head money on the collateral of a grandiose's check or a milk cost. It may stock new merchandise sold for cash; no lending.

It can be seen therefore that the stage is set for a new image for the pawnbroker; the old sign does not fit the picture, and, as noted in the opening sentence of this caustic, the image is the thing.

So the Madison Avenue boys who can create images out of nothing if need be, have been co-opted to rescue the reputation of the pawnshop. The brass balls are out.

To their credit they have devised a sign which clings slightly to the original, a whirling design in triple form which has all the earmarks of modern drafting, ingenuity and thus makes it a suitable status symbol. And the three connected circles with a little imagination can be linked to the original Lombardy gold balls.

And to henceforth the pawnshop steps up in the business world.

If he knows about this I am wondering however what the good St. Nicholas, shortly I suppose to come upon the local scene in his white whiskers and red robe now the days are beginning to shorten, may be thinking. It was the original Santa Claus who gave three bags of gold to save a poor man's three daughters who originated the sign of the three golden balls.

And many a household doubtless has come to bless his example. Money-lending, you see, now elevates to lowest rank, had a humble beginning.

Beneficial Trade

WHEN Stalin died in 1953 the Soviet satellites in Eastern Europe represented mystery and menace to Canada. The Hungarian uprising and suppression in 1956 encouraged our fears.

The change today is remarkable. Canada has concluded a trade agreement with Hungary, which includes a Hungarian commitment to buy $24,000,000 worth of Canadian goods in three years. Trade Minister Sharp refers to "long-standing" trade relations with Poland and Czechoslovakia which were strengthened by recent sales last

A Much Too Modest Estimate

YOU'D almost think that a businessman, of all people, would surely know the value of the dollar. Especially his own.

After all, he learns it the hard way, through the often difficult and always exacting pressures of meeting a payroll. But no, it doesn't always work out that way.

Take the case of Halifax businessman Frank Penny.

He worked up a big enough head of steam about the ever-controversial Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism to make a personal appearance of protest when the traveling federal roadshow made a one-night stand in the Nova Scotia capital.

With a driving sense of urgency, he strode purposefully to the front of the hall, and stood arms akimbo, looking the "B'n'B" Commissioners square in the eye.

There was a wanton waste of public money, he told them. (The 10 commissioners, including the co-chairmen, Andre Laurendeau and A. Davidson Dutton, draw a daily $100 each plus all expenses, of course.)

Businessman Penny charged that any royal commission investigation into bilingualism, in a country of 13,000,000 English-speaking Canadians and only 5,000,000 French-Quebeckers, was a plain case of "the tail wagging the dog."

Then, winding up for the big pitch, he protested that the "B'n'B Boys" would cost the taxpayers "some three-quarters of a million dollars" before they are through—and then, their report, like most others "will be filed and forgotten."

Businessman Frank Penny doesn't know the half of it.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon has news for him—and even bad news—in the federal government's estimates, which list the cost of every project, including even royal commissions, undertaken by the administration.

And by Mr. Gordon's own above-reproach-or-question figures, the "B'n'B" caper so far is costing—and this comes from the official estimates—a not inconsiderable total of $2,256,000.

A shade more than that "three quarters of a million" estimate of his which so bothered businessman Penny.

And how do the finance department's estimates arrive at that total?

Simple. Here are the figures from the budgets allotted by Privy Council to the bilingualists:

For 1963-64, as provided in the supplementary estimates: $285,000.

For 1964-65, as provided in the main estimates: $1,187,000. For 1964-65, as provided in the first supplementary estimates: $784,000.

But isn't that $784,000 just part of the $1,187,000? Perhaps the first instalment?

Indeed not.

"It's in addition," says the office of the clerk of the Privy Council, "that's why they call it supplementary estimates. It's extra."

Why is it extra?

Well, that "B'n'B" people would spend $285,000 in the first few weeks of their operation last year is understandable—especially if you see the way money is shovelled around here. (As if they have their own mint and two banknote printing plants turning out the stuff, which they do.)

That they then would put in for $1,187,000 in the main estimates, tabbed only a few weeks ago, but budgeted last fall, is more difficult, but not impossible to understand. (Remember that Mint and those money presses.)

Summer Of Tension

From Colonial Files

WINSTON CHURCHILL, one of the first British leaders to sound alarm over Germany's secret rearmament, predicted a summer of tension and conflict. Churchill's letter to Prime Minister Lloyd George, dated July 1, 1936, said: "I consider that the worst would happen and happen quite soon."

If one were to consider only the German preparations, Mr. Churchill said, the tone of Germany's government-controlled press and the speeches of the party leaders, "there could be no conclusion possible but that the worst would happen and happen quite soon."

In Victoria, a new "cyclo-drome"—a bicycle racing track—was about to open; a picture in the Colonist showed Torchy and Doug Peden and Russ Patrick—member of the New York Rangers Hockey Club and a former professional bike rider—in pre-inaugural practice.

The photo that heralded the First World War was fired in Sarajevo, 50 years ago: "Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, his morganatic wife, were shot dead by a student on the main street of the Bosnian capital a short time after they had escaped death from a bomb hurled at the royal motor car."

The Colonist complained about the requirement that visiting American motorists must take their cars out of Canada through the same customs house by which they entered, and also about unnecessary delay at the Victoria customs house.

Motorists from the United States were avoiding Victoria because of the delay and entering Canada by one of the Mainland highways, an editorial said, and since there wasn't much to see in the Fraser Valley, they were crossing to Nanaimo and visiting Alberni or Campbell River.

"In most cases they have not time to come to Victoria. . . . If the passport issued on the Mainland could be surrendered here, or vice versa, motorists could make round trips, greatly to their own pleasure and a little to the advantage of Victoria."

The B.C. St. George's Society was planning a "picnic and excursion to Colwood Flats" by the E & N Railway as a Dominion Day celebration 75 years ago.

For the occasion, the advertisement said, "games and sports for old and young will be provided and indulged in during the day. Baseball, football, tennis, croquet, etc. Substantial meals and refreshments of all kinds, ice cream, fruits and candies will be supplied at town prices. . . ."

The St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society was advertising its "annual gathering on the Society Grounds, Beacon Hill," on the Fourth of July.

"The grounds have been specially prepared, the Dancing Platform enlarged, and will be tastefully decorated and illuminated with the Electric Light. In the evening a GRAND DISPLAY OF FIREWORKS."

"Very strong indications of the presence of coal oil" were reported to have been found "on Mr. Street's estate at Saanich (now advertised for sale) and also on other places in the vicinity," 100 years ago.

"On some pools or springs of water a thick coating of oil is found to exist, and a man who is employed on the estate states that it promotes precisely the same appearance as the celebrated oil springs in Canada West. The discovery of coal oil springs on the island would prove of immense value to the country."

Commendable

It was most gratifying to note that the federal and provincial governments have started negotiations for restoration of Craigflower Manor as an historic site. With Ottawa offering to share the costs with B.C., we are hopeful that the grounds of the lovely manor can once more be restored to their former beauty and dignity.

We would like to commend the provincial government for their foresight in considering the preservation of this historic building.

A new and truly national flag for Canada in place of the present Red Ensign.

The two main racial streams which went to the formation of the Dominion were the French, whose standard at the time of the fall of Quebec was three stylized fleur-de-lis in gold on a pure white background, and the British, under the Union Jack or the White Ensign of the Royal Navy.

It would thus seem that the most appropriate flag for Canada should have a white background with three stylized fleur-de-lis in gold or crimson to emphasize the local character of the French-Canadian with the Union Jack quar-

Where Extremes Meet

Latin America Defies Classification

By J. MALCOLM FERGUSON, from London

Until the split between the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China newspapers tended to divide the world rather arbitrarily between East and West. This, rather confusingly, put Cuba in the East and Thailand and Japan in the West.

The Geneva conference on economic relations between developed and "developing" countries produced an even more dubious dichotomy, giving rise to the concept of North and South; the "have" nations to the north and the "have nots" to the south.

In the Old World of Europe and Africa and Asia this concept has some validity, though the South Africans, whatever their racial and political troubles, might well complain. Elsewhere it is thoroughly misleading. Australia and New Zealand are obvious examples of exceptions to the rule.

And Latin America is such a mixture of development, under-development and almost no development at all that it defies any classification... other than that almost all of its constituent nations depend primarily on the export of primary products.

Model Welfare State

Uruguay is not a manufacturing country, relying entirely on the export of meat, wool and grain, and yet it is able to support a full-scale welfare state for its 3,000,000 people, with the most generous old age and retirement pensions in the world.

Uruguayans sometimes call their country "the New Zealand of South America," and an Uruguayan newspaper once published an article headed "Have we a middle class?" The writer concluded not only that they had one but that practically everybody belonged to it.

At the opposite end of the spectrum is Haiti. Its 4,000,000 or so Negro people (there has never been a census) live crowded into the mountainous western end of the Caribbean island of Hispaniola in conditions that compare unfavorably with the most backward parts of Africa and Asia.

The great majority are subsistence farmers; malnutrition is widespread, and illiteracy over 90 per cent. The greater part of the ramshackle capital, Port-au-Prince, consists of shanties.

Feudal System Exists

At the other extreme are the states of the north-east, Para, Pernambuco, Rio Grande do Norte and the rest, where a virtual feudal system still exists, and half-starved peasants scratch a meagre subsistence from the parched soil.

Many give up the struggle and migrate to the opulent cities of the south, where they concentrate in squalid favelas or shanty towns, often cheek by jowl with luxurious apartment houses, and find they have no jobs because they lack the skills needed in a modern industrialized society.

This dangerous pattern of internal migration exists also in Mexico, Venezuela (one of the richest countries in the world), Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Chile, and even to some extent recently in Argentina and Uruguay.

But the "villas miserias" of these latter countries are by no means as bad as the favelas of Rio or the shums of Lima—indeed to an Indian villager they would appear as highly desirable places of residence.

Costa Rica Exception

Between Mexico and South America, the Central American Republics afford another example of the impossibility of generalization. Most of them are backward, politically either tyrannical or unstable, with high illiteracy rates and low calory intake.

Yet one of them Costa Rica, is a model democracy, with more schoolteachers than policemen, no armed forces, and more bookshops for its size than any other country in America—Canada and the U.S. included.

But perhaps the one thing that the Latin American countries do have in common was exemplified by the remark of the South African in Sao Paulo—unlike almost all the other so-called developing areas, Latin American problems are not bedevilled by racial complications. Argentina is a white country; Haiti is a black country; but most of the rest have mixed populations who live in relative harmony.

By IAN STREET

Nobody seems to have given much serious thought to what would be involved in handing over retail sales of electricity and gas to Greater Victoria municipalities.

This has been proposed, most recently by Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, as an additional source of revenue for local authorities who are, presumably, to be saddled with the money-losing transit systems.

The profits from the local sale of power would, in effect, subsidize the transit operation and the municipalities wouldn't be so much out of pocket.

Mr. Strachan says it's a case of quid pro quo, literally, something for something or a thing given as compensation.

But even he doesn't come right out and say this will meet all of the extra costs involved if the municipalities find themselves in the transit business come 1967.

In fact, if retailing of local power is part of the package, the municipalities will find themselves in the utility business, not once, but twice over. Not a very inviting prospect.

No one connected with B.C. Hydro here is willing to venture even a guess at what might be involved in the handover of the local power distribution grid.

But a questioner is left with the distinct impression that it would be a costly and complicated business and one the crown utility, at the administrative level, anyway, isn't lightly contemplating at the moment.

There seems to be some doubt whether New Westminster, which has retained power obtained wholesale from the B.C.E. since 1960, will be allowed to continue to do so when the current franchise comes up for renewal with B.C. Hydro in 1966.

Other centres in the Interior also retail power. Revelstoke is one. Kelowna another. It seems to be a profitable enterprise, but there always comes time when large-scale replacement of plant is required, and the picture becomes a lot less rosy.

Some of the smaller centres have even appealed for help to the B.C. Hydro when this situation crops up.

What would be involved if Greater Victoria got into the power business?

First, it couldn't be done by any single municipality or even two or three together. The distribution grid for the area, fanning out from the substation just north of Humbler Green is no respecter of artificial boundaries and covers the southern Island.

So, even on a local basis, it would have to be an area authority, fraught with all the difficulties that this involves in a balkanized community such as ours.

Then, the local authority would have to employ line crews and probably do a fair amount of contract work as well to keep the distribution system in good order.

Premier Bennett did some time ago offer the municipalities the transit systems for $1 but he soon thought better of it. This can be interpreted, I think, as a measure, not of generosity, but how anxious the government is to get rid of the transit headache.

There's no indication that Premier Bennett is willing to give away his two most profitable markets for domestic power.

Tourists Don't Come to See Eyesores

Sign Bylaw Needs New Teeth

By A. H. MURPHY

Perhaps it's time we got rid of our billboards. And while we're at it let's do away with those giant signs that leer at us from the tops of buildings.

Never, perhaps, in its history has the city been so concerned with its "image." Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent on Centennial and Bastion Squares, on downtown parking, on hanging baskets, cluster lights, paint, polish and redecoration.

New attractions are being constantly devised to lure tourists and, furthermore, the visitors are coming. But they are not coming here to see billboards—probably they are among the reasons they left home and followed the birds to beautiful Victoria.

Victoria's sign bylaw, which was passed in 1960, after a year of deliberation, indecision, pressure and agonizing re-appraisal, is about as tight as the city planning department would like but it is not a bad bylaw and deserves improvement.

Its passage was a triumph not only for the planners of that day but also for many other civic-minded organizations who backed it through one tortuous year.

A look at "before and after" photographs is conclusive proof of the benefits the bylaw has brought the city. It's hard to realize how appalling ugly the downtown area was before a few curbs were imposed.

The bylaw, watered down though it was from that original proposed in 1958, has brought congratulatory letters from civic officials all over Canada. Many of these letters have a wistful "I wish we could do it here" tone.

I don't think there's much doubt that the general public wants plenty of restrictions on signs, particularly "third-party" signs. The very fact that the citizens approved the Capital City Budget Plan so recently is an indication that they want their city made more beautiful.

Undoubtedly this pressure would be brought to bear again. However, as every alderman knows, pressure from minority groups is part of the job, and this council may well be strong enough to further tighten a bylaw which, many people feel, could be only good for the city.

There is no doubt the matter would get a thorough airing in council and these opposed to further regulations would have plenty of opportunity to make their wishes known.

But many people feel it would be good for Victoria. Our bylaw is not a quarter as restrictive as those of many other cities who depend on the tourist industry for part of their living. Bylaws in two California cities, Carmel and La Jolla, make ours look mild and they have helped boom these tourist havens.

EVOLUTION AND EYE STRAIN

Evolution developed human eyes for outdoor, distance seeing. Along came the printing press, and the face of the world began to change. A hundred years ago 90 per cent of the people lived in rural areas... now there are only 20 per cent. Everybody reads 10 times as much as 50 years ago—a high school or college student 15 times as much.

Civilization has made long hours of reading of close work essential. Eyes that would function perfectly well in an outdoor life where detailed and critical seeing are unnecessary often fail to stand the burden of prolonged close work without help. Eyes should be examined at least every two years to keep them operating at peak efficiency, and comfort.

More People, More Disposable Goods, But Less and Less Land

U.S. Running Out of Space to Dump Its Junk

WASHINGTON (CNS)—There is growing concern that the United States may soon run out of space to dump its junk.

With the population continuing to mount and as more disposable items come on the market, major cities—especially those in California—are finding it more difficult to dispose of their rubbish.

Some congressmen feel it's time to do something about the problem. Reps. James Roosevelt (D-Calif.) and John Leinski (D-Mich.) have introduced legislation authorizing a $35,000,000, three-year research program to find new methods to dispose of solid wastes.

TOTAL DOUBLED

Roosevelt, who represents part of the sprawling Los Angeles area, notes that 10 years ago the average Californian produced only 2.2 pounds of refuse a day. Today, the figure stands at about 4.5 pounds per person per day.

The U.S. Public Health Service says the national per capita waste figure is 4.5 pounds and estimates by 1980 the average person will produce about 5.5 pounds of solid waste a day for a national total of 200,000,000 tons.

The question is: Where is the country going to put all this junk?

'SPRAWL' TO BLAME

Roosevelt cites the fact that urban sprawl in Southern California and other fast-growing areas is gobbling up the open spaces that could be used for rubbish or junk yards.

Each day, 1,500 new persons come to live in California.

With every daily increase, 375 acres of farm land must be changed to subdivision, roads, public and private facilities.

The result: More sources of solid wastes and less land on which to dispose of them.

The increases in wastes are not only due to population growth but also to greater use of prepackaged foods wrapped in paper, cellophane and plastic and increasing quantities of disposable items.

Hospitals, for example, are making more use of inexpensive equipment which can be discarded instead of being sterilized for reuse.

Over 170 such disposable items are available today, ranging from paper blankets and latex paper gloves to plastic cutlery and cardboard bedpans.

Also contributing to the waste disposal problems are the tons of rubble resulting from slum clearances, highway construction and abandoned automobiles, refrigerators, stoves and furniture.

Refuse collection and disposal is a big business. Roosevelt said the U.S. spends about $3,000,000 a year to have its domestic, industrial and agricultural wastes picked up, hauled away and disposed of either by burning, burying or dumping in the open.

But burning of wastes adds to air pollution and burying of rubbish increases crop and plant diseases and open spaces are diminishing.

The proposal of Roosevelt and Leinski would provide funds for construction of at least five demonstration plants to find new methods or to improve on existing ones for disposing of unsightly and unhealthy junk.

For instance, you should be sure to have film in the camera. That's very important.

ACTION! ACTION! When you're sure you have film in the camera, shoot. But don't just anything... action, that's what home movies need... action!

Show the people moving around and doing things. Think before you shoot; strive for continuity; tell a story.

If you want to show people standing like so many tin soldiers in a row, use a still camera. If you're shooting movies, take advantage of movement.

Despite the fact that I have been a cameraman on more than 150 professional motion picture since 1917, I still enjoy shooting and experimenting with home-movies and talking to people about cameras.

RESULTS REWARDING

Seriously, that's one of the secrets. What you take movies, don't be afraid to use plenty of film. It'll cost a little more money, but the results will be more lasting and rewarding.

In Hollywood, of course, it's not uncommon for 20 feet of film to be shot for every foot that ultimately shows up on the screen. I'm not suggesting that you go overboard, but you only have one opportunity to film a given occasion. If you miss it, you miss it... no second chances.

Have fun with your camera.

I don't believe in tricks, hokey stuff and arty-crafty junk. Make sure your lighting is good. Don't waste film with poor exposures. If you don't have proper indoor lights, shoot outdoors.

KEEP STEADY Keep steady; be sure the light is over your shoulder; shade the lens from glare; don't attempt back-lighting unless you know what you're doing; try not to "pan" on a stationary object, but if you must, do it slowly to prevent a blur on the film.

Finally, expose for shadow and the highlights will take care of themselves.

Oh yes, don't cut the heads off. That's very important.

The average automobile tourist party puts approximately $91 into the provincial economy, according to a B.C. government study.

About $27 goes for food, about $22 goes to gas and ferry charges, about $18 for lodging, $15 for shopping and about $9 for entertainment and incidentals.

The farmer, food handler, cook, waitress, service station worker, ferry employee, motel and hotel employee, store clerk and theatre usher who shares in the proceeds of tourism knows its importance to his livelihood.

Mexican Method Defeats Drivers

MEXICO CITY (CNS)—The Mexican policeman on the beat carries a screw driver so he can comply with the locally unique police practice of removing the rear license plate from a car that is illegally parked.

To get the plate back, a driver must go to the neighborhood branch of the Traffic Department, work the day's crossword puzzle or play solitaire until his case can be heard by some busy and occasionally avaricious constable, pay a 50-peso ($4) fine, and hope that eventually he will regain his plate.

If he is lucky enough to return to the scene of the crime while the policeman is in the act of taking off the plate, it's often simpler to slip him the 50 pesos instead of going through all that folderol. The officer even may be obliging enough to reattach the plate.

So What!

What's all the fuss about? I say a girl should be able to please herself what she wears on the beach. I have favored a topless bathing suit for some time and what's more I intend to continue to do so, and to heck with the consequences. In a few years I may decide to cover up a little bit, but for now I want to feel gloriously free—as a two-year-old should. Those were the sentiments of little Kathleen Beaudier, of 609 Wilmer Street, "Interviewed" on Wilmer Beach. —(Jim Ryan)

Brilliant Jazzman Pays Tribute to Shakespeare

By CLYDE GILMOUR

Shakespeare is all the rage this year on the photograph as well as on stage and television. Astonishingly, the film-makers thus far have contributed nothing outstanding by way of celebrating the 400th birthday of the Bard, but the year is only half over, and hopes run high.

As a delightful novelty among the continuing onslaught of recordings honoring the immortal Will, a new Columbia LP with the cheeky title of Shakespeare's Greatest Hits (mono 2180, stereo 8080) deserves an ungrudging recommendation.

Dick Hyman, a classically-trained American jazz pianist and all-around musician noted for his good taste and versatility, is the composer of 13 songs using unimpeachable lyrics from seven of the plays: Measure for Measure, The Winter's Tale, As You Like It, Much Ado About Nothing, Love's Labour's Lost, Twelfth Night and The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

All are zestfully sung, with admirably clear enunciation of words, by Earl Wrightson, that trim-bearded swashbuckler of TV and musical comedy cinema. The Hyman-Wrightson talents are enjoyably successful in such songs as Under the Greenwood Tree, It Was a Lover and His Lass, and Sigh No More, Ladies. The sound is big and clear, and an enclosed leaflet contains the texts.

For customers more traditional in their Bardic songs, I can't imagine anything finer than Music of Shakespeare's Time (Decca mono 9421, stereo 79421), a gorgeous recital by the New York Pro Musica under Noah

Higher Yet?

Current Market Upswing Could Last Some Time

By HARRY YOUNG
Columnist Business Editor

Most of the indicators used by stock market analysts continue to say that the market is still capable of going higher. The upturn in the economy has now lasted about 40 months and is ranking as the longest in post-war history.

The gross national product, particularly in Canada, is doing better than was anticipated at the end of 1963, and there are few signs that there will be any slump in business before the end of this year at earliest.

All economic assumptions can be proved wrong, of course, but the high level of new heavy construction—particularly in British Columbia and Quebec—would appear to assure basic strength and continued level of high employment for the next year or so.

Meantime the more realistic approach to the stock market is that there is a potential price increase of about 10 per cent, while the potential loss from any change in the economic atmosphere could run to a drop of 20 per cent in stock prices.

PAPER GAINS

It is impossible for everyone to sell out at the top price, and those who play the averages are thinking in terms of at least some partial liquidation of paper gains, particularly in view of the 5% to 5 1/2 per cent yields available on high grade bonds.

On the other hand there is no question that support for the popular type of industrial share is as strong as ever, and with more and more money being poured into the mutual funds, this is a continuing support for the blue chip market.

There are many who thought that Massey Ferguson had gone high enough when it fetched $25. Now it is $30, and the potential earnings for the current fiscal year look as if they might amount to nearly $3.10 a share. On a price-earnings ratio Massey does not look overpriced at $30.

MAC-POWELL UP

In the British Columbia forest industry, the market value of shares in MacMillan, Blodell and Powell River, B.C. Forest Products and Crown Zellerbach have all risen sharply since the beginning of the year, and they are all holding well around the $20 level.

In the case of MacMillan, the expensive strike at Port Alberni, has indicated that the stock market is no longer inclined to sell stock short on labor disputes. MacMillan is losing money and markets through the prolonged stoppage, but investors are obviously preferring the company's firm stand to a settlement of a questionable order.

The testing time for the newsprint-pulp stock will come when the new mills being built in northern B.C. come into production. While the forecasts are all for an increasing demand for pulp over a number of years, it is quite possible that supply will exceed world demand for a period after the new capacity comes into production.

Investors however should remember that stock prices do not wait until the barometer changes. They usually anticipate well ahead. The downward trend could start at least six months before any visible effects become clearly obvious.

Fifteen champagne producers of France have filed a suit claiming $100,000 damages against a Canadian wine making firm.

Being sued is Chateau Gai Wines Limited of Ontario, and the suit will also ask that they be prohibited from using the word champagne on labels and advertising.

The French claim that in 1933 France and Canada signed a pact under which Canada agreed to recognize and protect the appellation "champagne."

A. G. Sampson, Chateau Gai president told the annual meeting his firm regarded the French suit as a tribute to the quality of the Canadian champagne made by Chateau Gai.

The case is to be heard in Montreal this fall.

SIZE NO OBJECT

The grade of ore being mined at Bethlehem Copper Corporation's property in Highland Valley is lower than when it started, but the ore reserve is growing so rapidly that the upper limits to the size of the operation are still in the speculative stage.

D. W. Pringle, mine manager, told shareholders at the annual meeting this week in Vancouver that the size of the Huettis zone had not yet been fully defined, but that 11 out of 12 holes drilled so far have averaged between 0.6 and 0.9 per cent copper over a length of 1,000 feet and 300 to 500 feet wide.

Mr. Pringle said as the reserves are proved up the company planned to step up its milling rate to keep pace with the lower grade of ore.

STEPPED UP

The present level of 3,800 tons a day would be stepped up to 6,000 tons by December this year, and Mr. Pringle said another expansion, bringing the capacity up to about 12,000 tons a day, is considered reasonable within the next two years.

In the "dreaming stage" is a 30,000 to 40,000-ton mill.

These projections are based on the favorable Huettis results and the fact that there are more zones to be explored in a cluster of mineralized areas surrounding the three zones so far developed.

Bethlehem shareholders should get their first dividend next February, by which time the current debt will have been wiped out and a working capital of $1,000,000 established.

D. B. Shaw Elected

A former football star and later a president of the Canadian Red Cross has been elected this year's president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

He is Donald Bruce Shaw, vice president of A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd., in Toronto, and formerly manager of the Winnipeg office. Mr. Shaw was one of the two men commissioned appointed by the government to assess the damage to the Manitoba floods, and had a similar assignment in Ontario in 1964 after Hurricane Hazel wrecked his home. Mr. Shaw played for Toronto Argonauts in 1955, and is still an ardent golfer, fisherman and hunter.

More to Come

Japan Trade Mounts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prospects for trade between Canada and Japan have never looked better, provincial trade minister Ralph Lofmark reported Friday as he returned with a trade mission he headed to Japan and Hong Kong.

He told reporters the mission was highly successful, ringing up about $3,000,000 worth of sales on each side "with a great deal more to come." And the mission found that Canadian business men dealing with Japan have "earned a reputation second to none — an unlimited amount of goodwill."

The minister did not give details of the sales but he and members of the mission made these other points:

STRONG BIDDER

Japan is expected to be a very strong bidder to supply some $20,000,000 worth of turbines and generators for the giant Peace River Power project.

A large Japanese ship will be launched soon to haul wood chips from the Kamloops area via a new lower mainland terminal to Japanese pulp mills.

FUELS TO JAPAN

Various plans are under study to ship natural gas and other fuels from B.C. to Japan and to other nations on the Pacific rim.

Prospects are improving for sale of rare metals to Japan and demand is rising for base metals and copper, already a major export.

The minister said the prospects are better than ever for joint ventures in B.C. secondary industry with participation of Japanese capital, directors and technicians and there are bright opportunities for exporting B.C. fruit, grain, milk and fuels of various kinds to Hong Kong.

AUTOMOBILES

Japan was interested in selling automotive vehicles of all kinds in western Canada, the minister said. And if the market warrants it the Japanese automotive interests would like to establish manufacturing facilities in B.C.

The minister said the Japanese view Canadians as "fair traders and they are extremely grateful for our attempts at reciprocity."

Iron Mine Sold, Reopened

VANCOUVER (CP) — Controlling interest in the Zebulon iron mine on the west coast of Vancouver Island has been purchased by Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd., and the mine has been put back in production, it has been announced.

The mine, shut down a year ago due to operating difficulties, was expected to ship its first cargo to Japan Aug. 10.

The announcement was made by C. J. Oates, president of Empire Ventures, the operating company.

The mine and concentrator operation is geared to an output of 25,000 to 30,000 tons of ore a month and ore reserves estimated at 1,500,000 tons are expected to be good for five years.

A four-year-old contract with Japanese steel mills for the purchase of the concentrates has been arranged through Kinoshita and Company Ltd.

Imported Car Deal Discounted

HAMILTON (CP) — Studebaker Corp. denied Friday it has offered to market a Japanese car line in the United States.

"Reports from Tokyo concerning plans of Studebaker Corp. to market the Toyota automobile in the United States are without foundation," Gordon E. Grundy, president of the Studebaker automotive division, said in a statement.

He said the statement was approved by Byers A. Burlingame, chief executive officer of Studebaker Corp.

Mr. Grundy said that officers of Studebaker Corp. have had conversations with several Japanese auto manufacturers and other overseas automobile makers. Such conversations have been purely exploratory in nature, he said.

Speaks Here Tuesday

If the Laurentide Bank of Canada gets its charter, the top man in the organization will likely be Peter Paul Saunders, president of Laurentide Finance. Mr. Saunders will discuss his firm's application to Ottawa at a joint meeting of the Kivana Club of Victoria and the Victoria Chamber of Commerce at a lunch meeting at 12 noon at the Empress Hotel, Tuesday, June 23.

ASK RITHETS!

You are invited to submit questions on insurance and similar matters for inclusion in this column. The article of each question is kept strictly secret.

Q: I will be going on my holidays and leave my house unoccupied for a while. Do I have to notify my insurance company?

A: No notice is required if your building is under public fire protection. Outside of such protected areas you would have to notify your Company if the building were left vacant or unoccupied for more than thirty consecutive days.

Major's Book Sells Well

Maj. George Nicholson reports his book, Vancouver Island's West Coast 1763-1962, has sold 3,000 copies and that another 2,000 have been ordered. The book has as its purpose a condensed summation "of practically every event of historic value" which has occurred in this area. The telling takes 356 pages and is illustrated with 110 pictures.

For July 1 Sidney Nearly Ready

Preparations for the annual Sidney Day celebrations July 1 are nearing completion with the big day next Wednesday. Centre of this year's activities will be the Memorial Park grounds by Sanscha Hall, where activities get under way at 11:30 a.m. with the arrival of the Sidney Day-Dominion Day parade which starts from Queen's and Third at 10:30 a.m.

Besides a variety of midway activities, there will be pony rides for the kiddies, a teenage dance and a dance for adults beginning at 9 p.m. at the hall.

The morning parade will include colorful floats and costumes and eight vintage cars from Victoria.

Miss Sidney, Joan Gardner, will be crowned at noon by Linda Douma, last year's Miss Sidney, who went on to be named Miss PNE.

The Junior Swinging Eighties, a teenage square dance group, will put on a dancing display at 2 p.m.

Other events will include a flag day ceremony performed by the Elks Lodge, a dog show by the Michael Williams Kennels, and a variety of dancing and entertainment by Fred Usher and his orchestra, the Cavaliers band and assorted singers and dancers.

"There'll be something for everyone," said an organizer. "We'd like people to pack a lunch and come for the whole day."

Goodwill Growth Helps Here

The growth of goodwill organizations taking place throughout North America will result in additional help to handicapped Victoria persons.

This was reported from Portland by George A. Gray, executive director of Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped, who is attending the 40th annual delegate assembly of the organization. Mr. Gray did not specify just when this additional help would be forthcoming.

"The ultimate goal of all Goodwill Industries is to place handicapped persons in private employment," he said.

58 Slain In Fighting

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP)—Fifty-eight persons died and there were 164 cases of arson in inter-tribal fighting in the Ruwenzori Mountains foothills in the first 24 days of June, Internal Affairs Minister Felix Onama told the Uganda National Assembly Friday.

30 Days Can Be Enough To See the Far East

By DONALD C. LANGLEY
A first-time traveller to the Orient, overwhelmed by colorful posters and brochures describing attractions from Tokyo to Bangkok, may find it difficult to plan his own trip over such unusual and unfamiliar ground.

It is possible, however, to cover most of the highlights on a 30-day trip, if time is budgeted carefully.

Tours Useful

Japan Air Lines' experts recommend that travellers consult their travel agents about escorted tours for their first Orient trip. Tours overcome the language barrier and insure that the trip will cover the most interesting ground. They also insure that the traveller will understand and enjoy what he sees.

(Many repeat travellers also prefer tours, relieved that somebody else will worry about baggage, reservations and transportation schedules.) But for those who like to map out their own here are some suggestions:

Half in Japan

On most Orient tours, about half the time is spent in Japan, the largest, most developed and most varied Far Eastern country open to visitors. Five more days should be budgeted for Hong Kong, three days for Bangkok and a day or two for relaxing on the beach at Waikiki on the way home. Another two days may be saved for Singapore, Angkor Wat (the ruins of the ancient Khmer civilization in Cambodia), the Philippines or Formosa.

The rest of the time should be left free for flying to Tokyo and beyond and to allow a little flexibility. But all transportation arrangements should be made in advance and not changed.

An Orient tour should begin in Tokyo, the world's largest, and possibly most hectic city. But there is much to see beyond it.

Nikko, a mountain resort which is also the site of Japan's most elaborate shrines, is easily seen on a one-day tour from Tokyo. Most visitors to Japan consider it a highlight of their trip.

A three-day trip from Tokyo to Kyoto, through central Japan, will cover some of Japan's scenic wonders: the giant Buddha at Kamakura, the lakes, rivers, forests and mountains of the Mount Fuji area.

Exploration of Kyoto is worth four days, including a side trip to Nara. In Kyoto, allow plenty of time for browsing through the studios of silk weavers, potters, or artisans in lacquer or cloisonne.

For relaxation, nothing is better than a voyage on the Inland Sea from Kobe or Osaka through the "Sea of Islands" to Beppu, a hot springs resort on Kyushu. An alternate to the Inland Sea is a short flight to Hokkaido, the rugged northern island of Japan which is the home of the Ainu aborigines.

Beyond Japan?

Floating Market
In Bangkok, the so-called "Floating Market Tour" is a colorful four-hour boat ride which winds through the canal-called khongs—which lace the city. Housewives shop for their dinner ingredients from boat to boat in this "Venice of the East."

The dazzling mosaics of Bangkok's Buddhist temples, which once shone on Anna and the King of Siam, have lost none of their brilliance. The major ones are temple of the emerald Buddha (Wat Phra Keo), temple of the reclining Buddha (Wat Po) and temple of dawn (Wat Arun).

In the evenings there is classic Siamese dancing, stately and symbolic, or the rough and dangerous Thai boxing in which combatants use their feet and elbows as well as their hands.

Hong Kong is known as a city of bargains, but visitors will find much to do between shopping forays.

Rooftop Topper

Enchanted world of little white houses, moated castles and mermaids greets visitors to Denmark. Prominent in cast of characters is jolly chimney sweep who wears traditional stovepipe hat that has been stamp of his trade for more than three centuries.

Siamese Round-Up World's Biggest

A round-up Siam style is bigger and better than Texas, Calgary or even P.T. Barnum ever dreamed of.

The Thais have turned their annual elephant round-up into a spectacular, ground-quivering rodeo that has caught the attention of astonished Westerners.

MAMMOTH TUG
Highlight of a 24-day tour of the Orient arranged by Canadian Pacific Airlines, huge tugboats lumber on parade before a festive audience; the roping of wild elephants bring visitors to their feet, and a tug-of-war between 70 men and one mammoth of the forest furnishes an added touch of excitement.

Held in Surin, northwest of the splendid Thai capital, Bangkok, "mahouts" astride specially trained elephants drive hundreds of the huge beasts from the bush to help natives harvest the teak forests.

PLACATE SPIRITS
The round-up is a scene of festive dances and rites calculated to placate the spirits of the forest, and offers a rare opportunity for tourists to mingle and chat with the local inhabitants.

Scheduled to coincide with the Olympic Games in Tokyo, the tour leaves Vancouver Oct. 14, and members will have four days in the Japanese metropolis during the games. Another four days in the shopping paradise of Hong Kong, and a two-day visit to Bangkok follow the elephant round-up.

In all, 12 major Orient centers will be visited, including Taipei in Formosa.

It Isn't So Hot—Really

Florida's Rain No Gentle Thing

By PEGGY TANFIELD

CAPE CORAL, Fla. — Anyone stepping off an airplane straight from some point in Canada in the middle of July, on to the tarmac of a big airport in Florida loses his breath momentarily.

Waves of heat, like those emanating from a gigantic blast furnace bombard the newcomer, reflected from the pink walls of nearby buildings from the ground, and directly from the sun. This first experience can be shattering, and leads him to ask whether anyone in general and himself in particular could survive living and working in Florida in the summertime.

ADJUST WELL

Well, some six million people do just that, and four million of these are all arrivals from northern parts, who have made the adjustment pretty well.

So, the question is: how did they survive, how did I, and how would you?

In the first, and most obvious place, you won't in all likelihood be living in an airport, with all that expanse of hard reflecting surfaces to deal with.

A strange sort of phenomena occurs here, weatherwise, for the rays of the sun are strong and hot . . . much more so than in Ottawa or Toronto. In both these cities, the temperature goes over the 100 degree mark at least once every summer. Here in Cape Coral, oddly enough, in the past three years since my arrival, the temperature has never gone over 95 degrees.

DAILY RAIN

The weather bureau told me that the temperature was moderated both by the constant breezes and by the almost daily rainfall during the summer months. In this part of Florida, we are close to the Gulf of Mexico, and there are several sets of breezes which blow back and forth.

In the morning come the trade winds from the east, and in the afternoon these are replaced by the westerly sea breeze. Later at night, the land breeze starts blowing in the other direction, out to sea.

In a modern planned community such as Cape Coral, are placed to reap fullest benefits of the breezes, and to shield from the sun. There are many homes here without air conditioning, for the simple reason that the constant breezes act as a built-in air conditioner.

The summer season is known as the rainy season, and it rains with an intensity undreamed of "the gentle rains from heaven."

A rainy day doesn't work itself up to it all day long, with continuous mutterings in the distance, as it does in Toronto, nor does it descend with the pyrotechnical fury of an electrical storm up the Gattineau.

One moment, all is calm and sunshine—the next moment is as though someone pulled the plug out of an overhead ocean. Just rain. Dedicated, direct and drenching.

U.S. Copter Shot Down In Viet Nam

APLONG HOI, Viet Nam (AP) — Communist guerrillas brought a U.S. helicopter down in flames, killing two Americans but touching off a fierce ground fight that killed 40 Reds, U.S. military advisers reported Saturday.

In addition to the two U.S. airmen killed—the 145th and 146th American combat deaths in Viet Nam—two U.S. gunners were wounded, one seriously. A Vietnamese army observer aboard also was killed.

The helicopter was shot down by a 106-mm rocket fired from a Viet Cong position. The crash site was about 10 miles from the coast.

The helicopter was carrying two U.S. airmen and two Vietnamese crew members. The two airmen were killed. The two Vietnamese crew members were wounded.

Suit Show One-Sided — Wrong Side

DENVER (UPI) — Photographers and newsmen who viewed the new women's topless bathing suit here returned grumbling that the entire show was a one-sided affair.

Lana Logan, Miss Lakewood (Calif.) of 1961, modelled the outfit, but showed reporters only the backside. She said she would model the suit properly at a fashion show later for women only.

'Awfully Nice' Goldwater's Advice Rejected

RAISON (UPI) — Outgoing U.S. ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge said yesterday the war in South Viet Nam is going well and sarcastically rejected Sen. Barry Goldwater's "free advice" on how things should be run.

Lodge was speaking at his final Saigon news conference. He leaves today for the United States to help Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton try to wrest the Republican presidential nomination from the Arizona senator.

"Developments make me believe we are on the right track and that this (military) effort is going to be successful," Lodge said.

PRIVATE LIFE

He referred to Goldwater's suggestion that Lodge enter private life to expose what Goldwater has called a weak Viet Nam policy and said:

"It's awfully nice of him to give me this free advice and give me these assignments."

Liquor, Driving Result in Jail

Six-month jail term and a two-year driver's licence suspension were imposed in British Columbia court yesterday on Garfield Hanson, who last week pleaded guilty to four charges.

Hanson appeared before Magistrate J. A. Byers for sentencing on charges of obstructing a policeman; dangerous driving, driving while disqualified and being a minor in possession of liquor.

He had previously been convicted of driving while disqualified and dangerous driving.

A Sooke man who tried to escape from police because he had liquor in his possession within a half-hour of his 21st birthday, pleaded guilty in city police court yesterday to dangerous driving.

Ronald Shambrook, of Sooke, was speeding on Government

Street at 11:30 p.m., Friday, and when police gave chase he drove through a red light and

Garden Notes

Don't Behead Them

By M. V. CHESNUT FREE

SWEET PEAS (K. McC., Cordova Bay)

It wouldn't be a good idea at all to pinch the tops out of your sweet peas just because they are growing too tall for their supports. Such beheading would produce a regular forest of side shoots from the leaf axils—the angle where leaf joins stem—and would result in vast quantities of short-stemmed, worthless flowers.

This overly tall growth is overcome by a technique known as "laying" the vines. Each sweet pea vine is detached from its support very carefully, and is tied in to run horizontally for several feet, about a foot off the ground, then the tip is trained upward again. This, in effect, "takes up" some of the height.

This is fairly common practice among the real hot-shot sweet pea fanciers, but the job is a ticklish one and should be done in dampish weather, otherwise the main stem may crack or break in the handling.

Keep all the side shoots pinched out, and give the vines an overhead spray with clear water every evening following a hot, dry day.

LILAC MILDEW (L.W., Victoria)

The dirty grey deposit on the leaves of your lilac bush is mildew, quite a common fungus infection. This is often associated with dryness at the deep roots, and I suggest you make some effort to restore the subsoil moisture first by really deep watering, then by applying a surface mulch of leaves, mowings, straw, peat or manure over the rooting area.

The mildew itself can be cleaned up with any of the proprietary mildew remedies—karathane, wettable sulphur, mildeco, Acti-Dione—or by all-purpose cure-all sprays such as Cardol, Pomogreen, Ralco Rose Spray and Oriho Home Orchard Spray.

A home remedy which often gives good results against mildew—when the contributing subsoil drought is corrected—is ordinary washing soda,

SEA LAVENDER (G.M., Dunsmuir)

The proper time to pick Statice or Sea Lavender for drying as "everlasting" flowers is when the individual florets on the stalk are nearly but not quite opened wide. Strip off the leaves, make up the flower stalks into small bunches and hang them, head down, in an airy place out of the sun until quite dry and papery.

Statice is a maritime plant, hence the nickname Sea Lavender, and comes from salt marshes around the Mediterranean basin, and for healthy growth and clearest colors the plants should have a little common salt in their diet. One level tablespoonful per gallon of water, applied to the roots when the flower buds are forming, will make a surprising difference. Even better than table salt is natural sea water, one part to three parts fresh water, applied with a watering can.

Father Carries On

By JACK SMITH

Our younger son has gone to camp for the summer and left us with a baby bird, an injured dove and a red spider.

I was hoping he would at least leave nature in balance when he went away.

The bird was on the kitchen sink under a vegetable strainer when I came home. It was only a featherless infant, ungainly and vulnerable. Every few seconds it gave up a melancholy cheep.

"What's the meaning of this?" I asked. "We've been through this before. You know it won't live."

"It might," he said.

"How come you have it imprisoned like that?"

"That's to keep the cat away," he explained. I went into the living room to think it over. Supposing the bird pulled through, and got its wings. Who would teach it how to fly? When it comes to mothering a bird there's no substitute for a mother bird.

"Sooner or later," I explained, "we'll have to put it out, and then it will be easy prey for some cat."

"We have to try," he said.

"Whenever you fool with the balance of nature," I said, "you're asking for trouble."

Then I saw the spider. He was right in the middle of the room, on the carpet. The cat saw him too. The spider saw the cat. He took six quick steps. The cat took one long lazy step, closer to the spider, then she looked away and deliberately yawned, as if she really didn't care.

The spider decided to run for it. He went sideways five inches and frontwards two; he stopped. The cat looked sideways at him. She measured the distance from the spider to the couch, under which he would be safe.

The spider threw himself into instant high gear and reeled off a full yard. The cat wound up, unwound, and leaped, making a swift, neat arc and alighting silently a foot beyond the spider. She reached out a paw and turned him over.

The spider went ape. He panicked. He ran straight for the cat. She rolled out of his way, flicked out a paw and turned him around.

I couldn't stand it any longer. I shut the cat in the kitchen and got a newspaper and enticed the spider to get on it.

"What are you doing?" my wife asked.

"I'm putting the spider outside," I said. "I can't just sit here and watch the cat torture the poor beggar. It isn't human."

"Aren't you fooling with the balance of nature?"

"Not at all," I said. "If God hadn't wanted me to save the spider he wouldn't have given me a superior brain and a thumb."

We heard a cheep from the kitchen.

"Good Lord!" I cried. "The cat's after the bird!"

He brought the dove in that evening. It had a broken wing. I'm supposed to write once a week and let him know if everything is alive.

Dean Martin Nears 50!

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Don't faint, but Dean Martin, who looks like the eternal playboy, will be hitting 50 this year. . . . United Artists is planning to release the new Martin picture which stars Martin, Barbara, Tony Quinn, Grace Kelly, Omar Sharif, Ewa Martinelli and Akim Tamiroff.

According to that excellent actor, Christopher Plummer, now starring in The Sound of Music, "Marlon Brando could have been the greatest actor of our age, if he hadn't gone to Hollywood." Martin was supposed to return periodically to Broadway, but the Hollywood flashpots were too alluring.

Whenever I chat with long-time marriage hold-out Hugh O'Brian, we somehow get on the subject of why he has never married. "I'm not going to let anyone force me into it," says Hugh firmly. "Most men get married because there is nothing else to do. I'm going to get married when there is no other answer. When I want to live with a girl because I can't live without her." Hugh's career is doing better than his plans for matrimony. Columbia has picked up his option at a six-figure salary. "Five pictures at the rate of one a year." Boss Mike Frankovich liked what he saw of Hugh in Love Has Many Faces with Lana Turner.

It always happens. Just as Shirley Jones was ready to give up Hollywood to live with her actor husband Jack Cassidy in New York, along comes an offer to Jack to make movies in Hollywood. The handsome look-alike for the late John Barrymore will do just that when he completes his time in Fade Out—Fade In on Broadway.

Carroll Baker comes from Pittsburgh, but this is one of the cities where there is a clampdown on the ads for her latest picture about to be released, The Carpetbaggers. A girl who strips is without honor in her own city, it seems.

Stella Stevens who bowed out of the Jerry Lewis picture because of other assignments, has signed with Vince Edwards to play his girl friend in five Ben Casey segments. Vince has also signed the pretty blonde for some private-life dating. Stella is helping the dear doctor redecorate an apartment in the building he owns, for the visit of his mother, aunt and uncle.

A letter from Mrs. Ray Milland, to say that Ray's opening night as Professor Higgins in My Fair Lady went over extremely well in Ohio. But he was so nervous at the dress rehearsal, that he bit his tongue and Henry Higgins sounded at that performance like he needed speech lessons more than Eliza Doolittle!

16-Year-Old Bass Champ Wins Lodge Trip

A 16-year-old bass fisherman from Prospect Lake has won a weekend holiday for two at Campbell River's Painter's Lodge as one of the main King Fisherman Contest hidden weight prizes for May.

Rene Nielsen, 137 Goward Road, wins the prize for a 2:30-pound bass he caught May 5. As a prize-trip partner he will take along his father, Paul, who is chef at King Arthur's Round Table and another keen fisherman.

As a special treat they have invited Mrs. Nielsen (Ulla) and Rene's nine-year-old sister, Dale.

Donald (Corky) and Joan Corbett, proprietors of Painter's Lodge have arranged for the family to have one of the lodge's luxurious cabins, complete with hotel service.

The family will register at Painter's Lodge on the evening of July 17 and for the weekend the prize winners will be treated like fishing kings. They will be supplied with boat and will be guided to the hot fishing spots, just at a time when Campbell River should be at its best for bucktail fly fishing for coho.

George Garalde, 5504 Old West Road, wins a guided fishing trip for two with Brentwood guide Jim Elliott for a 2:5-pound bass he caught in Elk Lake.

Dorothy Parker, 1180 Fairfield, wins a special women anglers' prize for her 2:1-pound spring from Beechey Head.

Hidden weight draws were made by Alex Dehart of Jeune Bros., who donate the main prizes for river trout and lake trout fishermen. Pat Riley, of Lake Cowichan, wins a salmon rod, reel and line, for a 1:3-pound brown trout he caught in Cowichan River May 14.

Four lucky winners have won dinners for two at the luxurious Terra Cotta Room of the Dominion Hotel.

They are: R. Daggitt, 3971 Century Road, for a 3:10 trout from Shields Lake.

Appraisers Accept City Men

Two city men have been received into the Appraisal Institute of Canada, as accredited appraisers.

Received were: Gordon C. Munro, mortgage officer and appraiser for the National Trust Company Limited in Victoria, and Ralph E. Shandley, property appraiser for Saanich.

Mr. Munro is a member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers and is past president of the Victoria Chapter.

Mr. Shandley is former assistant to the treasurer of the B.C. Cement Company Limited and a former member of the plant accounting department of the B.C. Electric.

Club Seeks Camp Site

The search for a site for a camp for mentally and physically handicapped children is still being carried on by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club.

The camp, when developed, will contain sleeping accommodation for about 30 children, and the Kiwanians expect to spend about $25,000 in buying and clearing land and building eight huts which will form the camp.

The club has decided on a beach camp and is looking for suitable lakeside land on which to build it.

Dockyard Man Wins Cash Prize

HMC Dockyard pipefitter Rowland Clark, 2191 Alamy, has been given a cash award for a suggestion concerning the design and manufacture of pipefitting tables now in use by the navy. The award was made by the Suggestion Award Board of the Public Service of Canada.

G. Vieweg, 1005 Nishabon; for an 8:2 spring salmon from Saanich Inlet;

Ted King, 5900 West Saanich Road, for a 3-pound bass from Prospect Lake.

Sets of six of the fish-entangling Rhys Davis Taser lures have been won by E. V. Stavrov, PO Box 1114, Duncan, for an 8:2-pound steelhead from Caycuse River; M. Geyette, 3102 Earl Grey Road, for a 5:8-pound lake trout from Cowichan Lake; and G. Holmes, Qualicum Beach, for a 8:12 coho from Qualicum Beach.

Evelyn Wilson, 600 Canon, Nanaimo, wins a spinning reel for a 2-pound lake trout. Mrs. Paul Kujala, R.R. 2, Alberni, wins a tackle box for a 3-pound trout from Sprout Lake.

David Ryan, Ganges, wins a folding aluminum camp chair for a 2-pound bass from St. Mary Lake.

Robert Green, 1615 McIntyre, Port Alberni, wins a Pecos salmon fishing reel for a 4:8-pound cutthroat from Taylor River.

W. G. Hook, 3067 Albina, wins a vacuum jug for a 7:4-pound spring from Saanich Inlet.

Winners will either have their prizes delivered to them or will be informed when to pick them up at the Colonist editorial offices.

Alex Dehart of Jeune Bros. draws lucky ticket.

Livestock Herds Quarantined For Anthrax

Saskatchewan authorities have been alerted to emergency measures following the discovery of anthrax in a herd in the Beasegough area.

Six animals are dead. Dr. V. E. Smiler, provincial veterinarian, refused to disclose the exact location of the herd, but said quarantine had been imposed and the carcasses burned.

Saskatchewan

A colony of beavers has helped solve the water shortage at Plover Lake, a community of 300 homes near Yorkton.

When the static water level of wells appeared to be falling, engineers cast about for an emergency supply.

They found it in spring fed creeks which had been dammed by beavers at Milligan Creek a few miles east of the town.

All that was needed was plastic hose and a pump—and the continued co-operation of the beavers.

Drought has forced Saskatchewan beekeepers to feed syrup made of sugar and water to their swarms. Carl Meilike of Prince Albert, director of the Saskatchewan Honey Producers Co-operative, reports Mr. Meilike said the situation could change if rain and hot weather arrived quickly.

Saskatoon city council has approved tentative plans for construction of a 5,700,000 bridge across the South Saskatchewan River and a freeway through part of the city.

Alberta

Premier Manning does not think Indians' treaty rights will be affected if they are given the right to vote in Alberta provincial elections. He was commenting on a decision by the Alberta Indian Association not to seek provincial franchise for fear of losing treaty rights.

A spokesman for the Calgary local of the Alberta Teachers' Association says teachers strongly resent a Calgary school board ruling making daily homework compulsory for all public school children.

A rise in price of from $1.50 to $1 a hundredweight for slaughter steers in the U.S. market has halted the northward flow of beef.

In fact, last week, a load of Alberta beef heifers was shipped to Seattle from Calgary.

The Canadian price stays at about $23 per hundredweight.

Plans for a $40,000,000 apartment and commercial complex are announced in Calgary, south of the Bow River.

"It is a quite fabulous proposal," said Mayor Grant MacEwan.

A 20-month-old child, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Warner of Calgary, was electrocuted when he put a knife blade in an electric toaster and the handle into his mouth.

Manitoba

The world's first plastic house has been on display at the Red River Exhibition grounds.

Winnipeg building circles were impressed.

This is a "startling new look" in Canadian construction, exhibitors claim. The 900 square-foot dwelling has high ceilings to give it spaciousness, is moulded under pressure and is said to be more durable than any other building material.

Northern Design and Fabrication Ltd. has put $500,000 into a new plant to construct the dwellings—mainly for export.

An RCMP officer of 12 years' service drowned when his car went off the road on the top of a coffer dam at Grand Rapids and plunged into 20 feet of water.

Cpl. Erwin Gaisbrecht, 32, lived at Grand Rapids, 250 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

A Winnipeg high school principal asserts the grade 10 department mathematics exam written by Manitoba students last week was too difficult. Principal J. M. Scudfield of Churchill High said the schools would have to adjust marks to give students a fair break.

Psychology In Art Discussed

Keen interest in the psychology of art was shown when 150 people attended a seminar on the subject at the University of Victoria yesterday.

Dr. Eugene Glaze, on sabbatical at the university from California, led off in the morning with an erudite paper on the subject.

Commenting on the psychologist's opinions were painters Richard Goodman and Herbert Sieber, actor Anthony Jenkins, sculptor Dr. Alfred Carlsen and architect John Di Castri.

Later, giving a personal analysis of the creative process were author George Coma, dramatist Carl Hare, painter Donald Harvey and poet Robin Skelton.

Commenting on their talks were Dr. Lee Pulos and Albert Cox, psychologists, Dr. John DeLucca, philosopher, and Dr. Robert Feist, neurologist-psychiatrist.

Dr. Alexander Milton was moderator.

FIGHT BACK WITH ORTHO!
TRIOX kills ugly weeds on driveways, patios, walks!
Without bending... without stooping... without digging, you can get rid of every single weed that's marring your patio, your driveways, your walks, curbs or gutters. All you do is dilute and sprinkle TRIOX. It's as simple as that.
TRIOX does more than just wipe out established weeds. It prevents new growth for as long as two full years. Weeds wither and die before they can get started again, so you can forget about the work of old-fashioned weeding for a long, long time.
A word of caution. Since TRIOX application kills all vegetation, you don't want to use it on lawns or cultivated areas. For lawn weeds, use ORTHO WEED-B-GON.
Whatever your weed problem, ORTHO can have it licked this very weekend. See your garden supplier today!

'Good Old Days' Awful
By ERNEST MARSHALL HOWSE
A look at the past, it is said, is likely to prove only one thing: There is no time like the present.
The recent past has, in our time, been pictured to us as the golden age, from the glories of which the 20th century slid back into its peculiar horror. The years before the First World War are habitually presented as the "good old days" when almost everything was well with society; and society did not know it.
But, after we have examined these highly idealized times, we may be inclined to accept more calmly such disabilities and calamities as are ours today.
Sir Edwin Leather made some reference to this in a recent speech to the Empire Club in Toronto. He pointed out that the world is full of horrors—and that these are worse than they might be, because we can see most of them at home on television.
But before preparing a speech on the present state of world affairs he decided, he said, to check on the conditions of the world 100 years ago. In less than half an hour, reaching back at hand on his shelves, he collected the following items:
● In March 1864 very nearly the whole of the western hemisphere was in arms against itself. The American Civil War had reached its apex, the year of the ultimate horror. From March until November Grant and Lee were locked in the kind of endless, useless killing that was repeated only at Passchendaele and Verdun. The toll in death was 1,000,000 men.
● Britain and the United States were on the verge of going to war with each other. Mexico and more than half the nations of Central and South America were either at war with each other or among themselves.
● Canadians with their customary civility were only fighting with words and brick-bats. A minority government was struggling for its life. And in a by-election, which was only one of a series, more than 100 casualties were admitted to hospital in the city of Toronto.
● The eighth Parliament of the Province of Canada, sitting at Quebec, was squabbling endlessly about two bones of contention: separate schools, and the appalling relations between the provinces.
● Conditions in the country, said Sir Edwin, were so bad that D'Arcy Magee wrote to Sir John A. MacDonald promising to join the Sons of Temperance. In Montreal Sir Wilfrid Laurier was engaged in one of his periodic battles with Monag. Bourget, and barely escaped excommunication.
● In Europe, Bismarck was busily building up the military machine that was already beginning to make Germany the most feared nation on earth.
● In Africa the white man had scarcely ventured beyond the confines of the harbor installations. Africans and Arabs were being prevented only by force from selling their fellow-countrymen into slavery.
Sir Edwin concluded that after taking into full account Communism, the hydrogen bomb, Dr. Castro, Hal Banks and Dr. Chaput there is still a lot to be said for 1964.

Winter Incentive Results in Slump
MONTREAL (CP) — The bonus paid by the federal government to owners of homes built during the winter months has caused a slump in summer construction in the industry, officials of the Montreal Home-Builders Association say.
Association officials told a press conference that home-builders are prepared to counteract the development by a price-cutting program during the spring and summer months.
BONUS
The federal government currently pays a $300 incentive bonus to first owners of homes built between Dec. 1 and March 31. The program, designed to keep construction workers employed all year, has been described as successful by Labor.

Questions and Answers

By CHARLES TAYLOR

Q. We noticed in one of your recent columns that a reader was having some trouble removing plastic tile cement from his bathroom. We once had this problem, so thought we would pass the word along.
Adhesive removers didn't work for us. We tried. Putty knives are very hard on the knuckles when you scrape them along the hardened cement. Electric sanders fill up too easily and the dust, when you hit the plaster, is terrible. Naphtha is too volatile.
Instead, get hold of a blow-torch. Close the door, open the windows and put a fan in the window to blow out the smoke. A quick pass with the torch by one person will permit a helper to scrape off the softened adhesive easily. We used a propane tank torch.
A. Thanks for the information.

Q. It is a method we have not tried. And a word of caution. Don't burn yourself and don't burn the house down. In fact, if you try this method, we suggest you get the help of someone familiar with, and adept at, the use of a blow-torch.
Q. My daughter spilled a bottle of rubbing alcohol on the bathroom floor. I sponged it up as fast as I could but half the floor is now a different color. It is an asphalt tile floor. Can you tell me what to do to restore the color?
A. A light sanding, or rubbing with steel wool, may restore the color. It is worth a try. However, if the alcohol has penetrated too deeply, the chemical reaction may have permanently destroyed the color. In this case, the only remedy is to replace the tile.

Q. We would appreciate your repeating the information you once gave on removing black marks, caused by shoes, from light floor tile. Some of our floors are covered with vinyl tile, others with asphalt tile, and all are marked.
A. Black rubber heel marks can usually be removed from any of the resilient floors by using a strong solution of synthetic detergent and steel wool. Allowing the solution to stand a minute or two on the marks before scouring. One of the nylon scouring pads may be used instead of steel wool, but if the latter is used, a No. 0 grade is just right.
Q. Our son has just marked up our colored plaster living room wall with crayon. Can these marks be removed?
A. Try to sandpaper the marks off as much as possible. A solvent is not recommended because the color from the crayon may then penetrate the plaster.

Fifty Years Ago at Sarajevo

Fanatical Teen-Ager Triggered Holocaust

Two shots fired by a teen-ager in the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo 50 years ago were signals that set marching the greatest avalanche of armies the world has ever seen.

The fanatic teen-ager was Gavrilo Princip, one of six Serbian assassins abroad in Sarajevo that day—June 28, 1914—and one of 16 citizens of what is now part of Yugoslavia eventually convicted for plotting the act.

The Victims

Princip's victims were the tall, corpulent and courted Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the throne of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and his wife.

The aim of the Serbian nationalists was to protest Austria's annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1908 and to strike a blow for the freedom of all Slavs caught in the cold embrace of the ramshackle empire.

The shots were fired as the dual car was reversing out of a narrow side street after taking a wrong turn. Several previous attempts on the archduke's life had been frustrated.

Within minutes both the archduke and his wife were dead and Princip was a frightened prisoner.

Soon afterwards, the cannons of a long-expected war that eventually would involve tens of millions of men from almost every part of the globe were drawing up along the frontiers of Europe.

The assassination was the signal, not the cause, of the First World War.

Waterloo

The seeds of conflict were sown, some say, as far back as the Battle of Waterloo a century before and fertilized at intervals throughout the 19th century—the century that saw the British Empire spread to encompass a quarter of the globe while other European powers gambled their greatness on cornering what prestige was left.

War—a decisive war that would settle once and for all the hegemony of Western Europe—had been in the cards of continental diplomacy since Bismarck's iron-willed nation of German states inflicted unforgettable humiliation on France in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870.

War—a decisive war about empires and a rightful "place in the sun"—had been simmering with almost scientific in-

Historical Flashback By DOUG MARSHALL of Canadian Press

In Germany, Kaiser Wilhelm's

statements railed against "encirclement" of Germany. In England, even the pacific Lord Haldane admitted the need to brace against Germany's "swagging down the main street of the world."

Austria, with ambition undeterred by senility, seized on the Sarajevo assassination as a chance to absorb Serbia. Vienna issued an ultimatum and rejected Serbia's reply, although Germany's kaiser said the reply was so abject it dissipated a cause for war.

Russia, protective mother of the Slav races, stood by Serbia and on July 26 Austria and Russia both ordered general mobilization.

By the end of July, the complex network of alliances had precipitated a flurry of ultimatums. As deadlines expired, the war machines began to move despite the desperate efforts of diplomats to find the brake.

In a moment of panic the Kaiser, haunted by the Germanic horror of a war on two fronts, grasped at a chance to neutralize France and Britain. General Helmuth von Moltke, German commander in chief, was moved to tears by this attempt to sweep aside a decade of rigid planning for war on France.

The 1,500,000 men rolling towards France in 1,000 trains could not suddenly be stopped and turned around, the general insisted.

Steel Logic

On Aug. 1, 1914, a world "grown old and cold and weary," in the words of Rupert Brooke, was hauled gloriously to war by the relentless logic of railway trains running along predestined tracks.

At 7 p.m., precisely on schedule, German soldiers entered neutral Luxembourg at a town called Trois Vierges and nothing would ever be the same again.

Train Women

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Flying Club is training wives and girl friends to be emergency co-pilots. The idea, which originated with Ed McGee, member of the Brandon, Man., Flying Club, is to teach the women how to land safely should an accident or illness disable a pilot in the air.

Red Cross Chief Killed in Fall

ROME (Reuters) — Italian Ferri, president of the Italian Red Cross, plunged to his death Thursday from a window of his fourth-floor apartment.

Police said the 73-year-old former medical corps officer died moments after returning to his apartment from the Red Cross Spastic Centre, where he watched a number of children under treatment there receive their first communion.

Paving Drive On

SEATTLE (AP) — A meeting was held here Friday to propel the campaign for paving the Alaska Highway. The meeting involved the steering committee of the two-country Pave the Alaska Highway committee.

Last Show

The funeral of Edward of England in 1900 provided the last big show of Europe's interrelated royalty in power. Nimble and countless lesser royals followed the bier.

Almost unnoticed among them was an awkward figure of fate—Archduke Franz Ferdinand.

Prodigy Hailed As New Mozart

SALZBURG — A chubby, curly-haired 10-year-old boy pianist is being hailed here as a new Mozart.

Little Michael Gees, who has given recitals in Austria, Czechoslovakia and West Germany, has stunned music critics by his feeling for music and his astonishing presentation.

So great was the praise that the boy was sent here to perform for the faculty of the world famous Mozarteum which accepts only select pupils who will advance the Mozart cult.

Result: Michael was immediately accepted as the youngest-ever pupil.

Michael finished his first term with the highest honors the institute could bestow, and the city of Salzburg decided to subsidize Michael with a scholarship and an allowance.

The child prodigy himself is unconcerned with all the fuss. He says he just enjoys playing the piano.

May Surplus

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government had a $210,300,000 surplus in its financial operations in May, Finance Minister Gordon reported Friday night in his regular monthly statement.

Pay Taxes Or Fines In Esquimalt

Esquimalt residents will be subjected to a five per cent fine if their taxes are not paid before 5 p.m. Thursday.

"No exceptions," said Reeve A. C. Wurtele, Friday, as he paid his taxes. "We are giving people an added two days' grace as the last payment is really due June 28."

Payments mailed before the deadline but arriving late, will also be subjected to the fine.

Q. What keeps all flowers, shrubs and plants Bug-Free?
A. New GREEN CROSS General Purpose Flower & Ornamental Spray

It works in two ways because it is both a SYSTEMIC and a RESIDUAL insecticide. Result: widest possible control of sucking and chewing insects and mites. We especially recommend it as an early season spray for evergreens and for all-season insect control on shrubs and flowering plants. It even protects new growth which appears after spraying. Bonus: It's completely free of any objectionable odor. For rose lovers, we advise regular use of GARDAL ROSE SPRAY with SYSTEMIC action. It controls insects and diseases which attack roses in particular. Remember: SYSTEMICS ARE NOT WASHED OFF BY RAIN SINCE THEY ARE ACTUALLY WITHIN THE PLANT. They penetrate right into the sap stream and kill insects which suck the plant juices.

Kitte Turmell's Teen-Ager

Just Be Yourself

By KITTE TURMELL

What do "Upset Girl" and Actress Julie Andrews have in common? Probably nothing at all, "Upset Girl" would conclude. She read this column and wrote me about a teen-age dilemma—what to do when a rival moves in on you.

The day I got her letter I was lunching with the English star at the studio where she was starting work in a movie. Could she give some advice to "Upset Girl"? She'd be delighted, said Julie.

"Upset" wrote that she and a new boy hit it off from the start. They double-dated two nights in a row. She liked him and learned he wanted to go on dating her. Then along came this other girl, "Hard-to-Get."

"This girl is always going out with different boys," she explained. "Lots of times she'll string a boy along for awhile, then drop him flat. She knows how to get away real easy. Practically every girl in our crowd knows just what she does."

"So she started playing up to the boy I like, though she was dating others at the time. This boy came to a dance and as soon as he walked in the door she trotted over and grabbed his hand. Whenever they played a slow record she'd pull him out on the dance floor."

"However, he'd look over at me with the same wonderful smile as always. Later, he told me he was surprised at the way she'd come right over after him. We talked about some things we'd done on our dates, then he told me he was taking her home from this dance. He seemed ashamed he had asked her."

"So what I want to know is how can I defeat her? How can I get his mind off her and make him notice me more?"

Forget about "defeating" her, Julie Andrews advises. "And don't overplay for his attention. I doubt if any boy would like to know he walked into a big set-up and got caught like that, especially if everyone is on to the game except he. And then, 'Hard-to-Get' might get him and find she didn't really like him well enough to keep him. So there'd be a switch in pursuer and pursued, leaving them both feeling a little silly," laughed Julie.

"Nothing is more maddening when you're young than to be told to sit it out until you discover your real self. But, it's true, then people will be attracted to who you really are and will want to date you. It may take a long time, though. I don't feel I really found myself until I married."

"Meanwhile it helps if you're truly interested in other persons. If you go to a party with a boy who wants to be a geologist or an astronomer, what he can tell you might make the whole earth or sky look different to you. Or maybe the boy works at a hamburger stand. Then ask him, 'What goes first on the meat, the catup or the relish?' Or, 'What do most customers like — how do you hum or them?', etc."

"Finally, 'Upset' should take a tip from her rival: Don't grow too serious about dating until you're ready to go steady. Proof of how he feels about her will come when he asks for a third date. I don't think there's anything she can do now to 'hook him' except to be herself. Then if he likes her, it will be for her real self."

Children's Museum At Gallery

A new Children's Museum opened yesterday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, with an exhibition of dolls emphasizing the design elements of costumes from various countries of the world.

The exhibit is the first of a series of shows of art for children which will be featured in the museum.

The Children's Museum has been created to fill the need for an exhibition area for the works of art specially suited to children, said Gillian Edgell, gallery assistant.

The Art Gallery recently received a Koorner Foundation grant of $500 to purchase a collection for the museum.

Julie Offers Advice

English actress and award winner Julie Andrews, shown here dancing on set at studio with Dick Van Dyke, was interviewed by Kitte Turmell at Walt Disney's studio during film production of Mary Poppins. Her starring roles also include MGM's The Americanization of Emily and Sound of Music for 20th Century Fox.

Teen-Age Letters

Dear Kitte Turmell: I have heard that bangs can cause pimples. Is this true?—MERRY.

Dear Merry: Yes, I called two specialists and here's what they told me:

Our family physician, a dermatologist, said: "Bangs can cause or aggravate pimples. The oil from the hair gets in the pores. Can you prevent this by washing the hair? No. Because you would have to wash it every day as the oil kept coming back in and this would not be healthy for the hair—to wash it too often. If you really have pimples and want to get rid of them, get rid of the bangs. Meanwhile, keep the hair as clean as possible while you let the bangs grow!"

Gene Shacove, of Beverly Hills, hair-stylist for show-stars, added: "If pimples are a problem, you should not wear bangs, because of the oil in the hair. While letting them grow out, shampoo the hair every other day. Meanwhile, there are all sorts of headbands to hold the bangs off the forehead—ribbons, bands of grograin or velvet—barrettes, etc."

Dr. Arthur Roth, author of The Teen-age Years, a medical guide for young people and their parents, says: "There are two things you should remember about acne. One is that it is nearly always a temporary condition. The other is that since its blemishes are caused by an increased oiliness of the skin, the methods that work best in keeping acne to a minimum, until it is outgrown, are those that reduce the oiliness and increase the dryness of the skin."

For more pointers from Dr. Roth... with ABC's on Teen Health... and how to deal with: Acne... Health Worries... Headaches and Dizzy Spells... Strong Breath... and Weight Control... send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Kitte Turmell, care of this newspaper. Ask for Kitte's free leaflet: The Doctor's Advice.

Dear Kitte: Can you send me some information on training and requirements for becoming an airline stewardess?—Dianne.

Dear Dianne: A major airline which trains hundreds of air stewardesses every year says that most of the girls have had two years or more of college. Courses especially helpful are speech, drama, psychology, home economics, and hygiene. Foreign languages are also valuable. Write to the nearest office of the airline of your choice for additional information on this interesting career, for which many apply — and few are chosen.

Confidential to Unhappy: Don't be "putward bound" soon as your date pays attention to other girls, socially. To show jealousy indicates feelings of inferiority — and insecurity — that will make him uncomfortable and will not endear you to him or anyone around you at a party.

Dear Kitte Turmell: Every boy-girl party I go to turns into a madhouse. It's not the girls' fault — it's the boys'. They jump around, pour pop into the food, hop over furniture, and act like two-year-olds. We're all 14 and you'd think the boys would know how to act after three years of parties. What do we suffering girls do?—Merry.

Dear Merry: Handle this in three steps: 1. Plan short parties with so much to do that there's little free time for horsingplay. 2. Ask parents to be on call to act fast if trouble starts. 3. Don't invite the boys who spark trouble.

Dominion Day Comes Early in Seattle

Canada's national day — Dominion Day — will be celebrated three days early today in Seattle.

Not only that, American Scottish dancers and five U.S. bagpipe bands from Seattle and Tacoma will perform at the Seattle Century 21 Centre, to mark the occasion.

Only true Canadian representative there officially will be Comd General Albert S. Whitely, who will speak at the ceremonies.

And there's a special concession for Canadian visitors to this unique international mixture of crossed-sword dancers and U.S. Highlanders.

Officials say Canadian money will be accepted at par value for purchases and tickets to all Seattle Centre attractions today and throughout the summer.

Teach Value of Dollar

'No Faith in Tourist Bureau'

Businessmen of Victoria have lost faith in the Victoria Visitors Bureau, says a Victoria motel operator.

Fred Martin, provincial president of the B.C. Motels and Resorts Association, said the bureau will not get enough money to promote tourism to Victoria properly until it wins back the public confidence in Victoria it has lost in the past several years.

Mr. Martin said directors of the bureau should undertake a campaign, including speeches to service clubs and other groups, to educate the Victoria public about the value of the tourist dollar to the Victoria economy.

He said $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 will be spent by tourists in Victoria this year and federal government figures indicate that each of these dollars will change hands seven times in the year after the tourist spends it.

Mr. Martin, whose association sponsored hospitality conferences in various parts of B.C. in May, criticized the bureau for not helping bring such a conference to Victoria.

He said indications from various Victoria moists indicate this year could be a tourist year comparable to the 1962 Seattle World's Fair-Victoria Centenary boom year.

Called by Rathie

Mayoral Summit
On Bus Fares

Greater Victoria and Vancouver area mayors and reeves will hold top-level talks Friday in Vancouver on the proposed B.C. Hydro bus fare increase.

Mayor William Rathie of Vancouver said in an interview last night that he has invited the mayors and reeves of the four Greater Victoria municipalities "to have lunch with me next Friday."

PROPOSALS?

Asked whether he had any specific proposals for the mayors and reeves, Mayor Rathie said, "We'll have to consider that."

The meeting follows a closed meeting in Victoria May 25 among the heads of the nine municipalities to be represented Friday.

At that meeting a preliminary study of the likely financial consequences of municipal takeover of the buses was agreed to, it was reported.

BEFORE BOMBHELL

The May 25 meeting came before B.C. Hydro's bombshell announcement June 15 that it would seek to roughly double bus fares.

The new fares would be 25 cents cash for adults or five tickets for $1, as against the present 15 cents cash and five tickets for 50 cents.

Children's fares would double to 10 cents and a new category would be introduced for students, who would pay 15 cents.

The provincial Public Utilities Commission would have to approve the fare increase if municipalities object.

Offices

A fire of unknown origin caused about $2,000 damage to several offices of the United Construction Co., 1117 Blanshard, last night.

City firemen worked quickly to bring the blaze under control and the fire was extinguished about half an hour after it was reported.

Lieut. Robert Smirl was treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for a wrist cut which he suffered while fighting the blaze, but the injury was not serious.

Cause of the fire, which was reported at about 8:30 p.m., has not yet been determined.

Hole-in-One

Contest

This Week

The annual Hole-in-One contest sponsored by the Victoria Gyro Club will be held Wednesday through Saturday at Matlock farm on Cordova Bay Road.

The contest offers prizes of up to $50 for every hole-in-one shot on the 75-yard golf pitch, and daily prizes of $15, $10 and $5 will be offered to the three shots closest to the cup, if no one scores a hole-in-one.

SMALL MIDWAY
Besides this, there will be a small midway with a variety of games and contests. All proceeds of the events will go to Gyro charities.

Times for the carnival will be 2 to 10 p.m. Wednesday and Saturday and 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

WIDE VARIETY
The Gyro Club donates to a wide variety of charitable causes in Greater Victoria, including the Queen Alexandra Solarium, YM-YWCA and various other groups.

Its main project this year will be to help finance construction of a slender track at Oak Bay High School.

Downtown

Building Project
Now Out

Plans for one of the most ambitious building projects in Victoria's history, the Lochearn Towers, appear to have been cancelled.

FOR SALE AGAIN

For sale signs are posted at the property on which the structure was to have risen, the old Woodward's store area at Douglas and Courtney.

Asking price, through Town and Country Realty, is $365,000. It was reported earlier that Lochearn Properties Ltd. of Edmonton paid about $250,000 for the vacant Woodward's store and property.

TROUBLES?

Construction of a 15-story office building there was to have started before the end of May with completion date January, 1965.

A spokesman for Lochearn Properties could not be reached yesterday to comment on reports of difficulties in financing the planned multi-million-dollar structure.

In Prince Albert

Fugitive Sentenced
For Victoria Break-In

A man who escaped from Colquitz Jail Feb. 28 was sentenced in Saskatchewan Tuesday to two years' imprisonment on a breaking and entering charge. It was learned here Saturday.

Richard Rodriguez, 21, received the sentence in Prince Albert, Sask., magistrate's court when he pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering Spencer's Stores in Victoria on March 4.

Rodriguez escaped from the jail while serving a term for breaking and entering.

He had a little more than a year left to serve when he disappeared with Frank Carlow, of Victoria. He broke into Spencer's while in hiding in Victoria after his escape.

Carlow, who was serving a term for driving while suspended, later gave himself up to police and was given a further six-month sentence for escaping legal custody.

Rodriguez was brought into court at his own request in Prince Albert, where he is serving a five-year sentence on a number of breaking and entering charges in Calgary.

His two-year term will run concurrently with the one he is already serving.

He has still not been charged with escaping legal custody, but Saanich police say they may arrest him on the charge at the end of the term he is now serving.

Water Cuts Unlikely
In Saanich

It will probably not be necessary to impose any water use restrictions in Saanich this summer, Saanich municipal engineer Neville Life said last night.

He said the installation of a pump and water main system taking water from the Greater Victoria water reservoir at Mount Tominie over the mountain and down Gordon Head Road is believed to have ended a perennial water shortage problem in the Ten-Mile Point and Gordon Head areas.

Park Play Starts
Monday

The special city summertime park program for children from six to 16 years of age starts Monday.

Here is a list of the parks where children may enjoy supervised play:

Central Park and Beacon Hill Park, where the play areas will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

Oaklands Park open from 1 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. daily, as are the three parks: Banfield, Topaz, Hollywood, Stadacona, MacDonald, Redfern, Bay Street and Pemberton.

A staff of 35 supervisors has been hired.

"Most are experienced playground supervisors, including teachers, physical education instructors, YMCA people and a dozen university students," says Gordon Hartley, director of supervised playgrounds.

In Bank Holdup

Police Arrest
Wanted Man

A fourth man sought in connection with the April 24 armed holdup of the Cook and Quadra branch of the Bank of Montreal has been arrested in London, Ont.

Phillip A. Carow was arrested Friday on a warrant charging him with taking part in the $7,500 holdup.

A Saanich police escort will leave for London Monday to bring Carow back to Victoria. The warrant for his arrest was issued a few days after the hold-up and Carow had been sought since then.

'Neat as a Pin'

Closing of Dump
Mystifies Resident

The head of a group of loggers with health officials about the Hartland Road garbage dump says the recent order closing another dump has left him more perplexed than ever.

The comment was made last week by G. A. C. Dunford, president of the Prospect Lake and District Community Association, which has been campaigning for help from the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health for removal of the Hartland Road dump.

Mr. Dunford said he recently had a look at a dump operating near Happy Valley Road by the Sooke-Langford Sanitation Company. The health board ordered that dump closed earlier this month.

He said a furnace at that dump completely burned all burnable refuse, and, except for some metal lying around, the Happy Valley dump was "neat as a pin."

"I can't understand why they closed that one and didn't close Hartland Road," he said.

MP Suggests Sooke

Marina Shortage
Feared in Decade

Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton said here yesterday Greater Victoria will have to plan now for accommodation of tourist pleasure craft business 10 years from now.

He said the business is expanding so rapidly Greater Victoria will not be able to handle it without more facilities.

Mr. Chatterton said one area which could be developed in this way is Sooke Harbor, where a contract was recently awarded to blast and clear the hazardous Grant Rocks.

"A topic that has been discussed for the past half-century," he said, "is the dredging and development of the harbor to receive bigger, deeper ships."

"This could mean a big boom for the area. It lends itself to the establishment of more industry," including the building of marinas.

"But that's for the local people to decide. I don't know if that's what they want, but if it is, I'd be glad to take the matter up with the minister. I'd like to hear their ideas and suggestions."

Would Link Districts

Saanich Wants Green Belt

By HARVEY SHEPHERD

A green belt, to assure that open country will always be within a few minutes' drive for Victoria area residents, is under consideration by the Saanich planning department.

Saanich planner Thomas Loney says the idea of a green belt is an important part of a residential development study under way in the planning department.

Target date for completion of the study is the new year, he said, although parts of it are likely to be released before then.

For instance, the department hopes to have a study of University of Victoria development done by fall.

The green belt idea, he said, would be aimed at preserving open space for the benefit of residents, not only of Saanich, but of the whole Greater Victoria area.

"We certainly haven't come up with any answers as yet."

One of the advantages Saanich has, Mr. Loney said, is a number of "natural green areas," which, to a certain extent protect themselves without too much help from the planner.

Such areas are Mount Douglas Park, Benkenop Lake, the Royal Oak Burial Park, Elk-Beaver Lake, Observatory Hill and the Highlands.

And the municipality's job on preserving a green belt, he said, might be one of linking these natural green areas with open spaces used for such purposes as recreation and agriculture.

Mr. Loney does not think of a green belt as an area completely "sterilized" against development. There might be pockets of residential or other development in the area, he said, but its essentially open character would be preserved.

Among other things, Mr. Loney and his staff are studying agricultural economics.

In their green belt considerations, one of the things they will have to take into account is the farmer's problems and the pressures that send his land value and taxes up until the land isn't worth farming any more and he must resort to subdivision.

Such pressures, he said, lead to unrestricted development — not only destructive of open space but costly to provide with municipal services.

In recent years, he said, planning has slowed down such unrestricted development. But it is important that it be stopped.

The Saanich Peninsula has not only some of Canada's finest agricultural land, said Mr. Loney, but also Canada's only true Mediterranean climate. It is important that some of its rural nature be preserved.

Council Seeking Approval
For Street Light Project

Saanich council is seeking the approval of ratepayers in a slumberous area of the municipality for the extension of street lights into the area.

Council last week did what is known as initiating a local improvement for a $31,203 project to install street lighting in an area roughly between Cedar Hill Cross Road and Lansdowne and east of Shel-bourne, except for acreage already lit.

That means council has advertised its intention to proceed with the project, but if enough ratepayers petition against it within a month it will not go ahead.

Area ratepayers are to pay all but $3,852 of the cost. Street lighting improvements began a couple of years ago, when municipal council got the power to initiate such plans.

A further local improvement planned for this year would carry street lighting north to Blair between Shelbourne and Gordon Head Road.

If ratepayers allow the current local improvement, Mr. Life said, the lights should be installed by fall.

His Excellency Mr. Mohamed Hafez Ismail was received in audience by Her Majesty and presented the Letters of Recall of his predecessor and his own Letters of Credence as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from the United Arab Republic to the Court of St. James's.

His Excellency was accompanied by the following Members of the Embassy of the United Arab Republic who had the honour of being presented to The Queen:—Mr. Mohamed Samih Anwar (Minister Plenipotentiary), Major General Abd El Tawab Ahmad Hodeib (Military Attaché), Mr. Mohammed Farthy (Cultural Counsellor), Mr. Mohamed Abdel Khalek (Commercial Counsellor), Commodore Ahmed Fakhry El Sioufi (Naval Attaché).

Major Keith MacDougall and Mrs. MacDougall of Victoria wish to announce the forthcoming marriage of their eldest daughter, Ann Mary, to Mr. Colin Carlie Creighton, son of Mrs. Hugh Creighton of Victoria and the late Mr. Creighton. The wedding will take place Saturday, July 25 at 1:30 p.m. in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay. The bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Maj.-Gen. Charles MacDougall, CMG, and Mrs. MacDougall, and the late Col. and Mrs. George Hunter Ogilvie. (Peter Chapman photos)

Bride Carries Bible Topped with Roses

Baskets of pink and white gladioli and carnations were at the altar of St. Mary's Anglican Church in Oak Bay last evening for the pretty summer wedding uniting in marriage Joan Irene Moffat and Mr. Roger Frank Hollick.

Rev. Canon Hywel Jones officiated at the double-ring ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Moffat, 2541 Cardiff Place, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hollick of Victoria.

Choir boys sang during the signing of the register.

Elegant in its simplicity, the lovely dark-haired bride chose a courtier original gown of white textured silk with a garland of blush pink Chantilly lace encircling the waist. The floor-length controlled bell skirt, featuring unpressed pleats, fell gracefully into a chapel train. Her three-tiered scalloped veil of illusion net was held in place by a ribbed silk caplet trimmed with tiny orange blossoms from her mother's bridal headdress. The bride carried white roses and stephanotis on a white Bible.

Mr. Moffat gave his daughter in marriage.

Matron of honor, Mrs. Judy Dodgson, bridesmaid Mrs. Louise Morais and bridesmaid Miss May Guthrie were gowned alike in blush pink silk shantung accented the lace applique on the bride's gown. Their classic-styled dresses featured A-line skirts and sleeveless bodices. They wore single strands of pearls and headpieces of pink circlets and tulle veils on tone. Pale pink tipped gladioli, ivy and stephanotis were in their bouquets.

Mr. Ronald Cook was best man. Ushering guests to their seats were Mr. Douglas Greenwood and Mr. Richard Howe.

Mr. R. L. Merkin of Portland, Ore., proposed the toast to his niece at a reception in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. The wedding theme was carried out in the baskets of pink and white gladioli and carnations decorating the room and the phantotis were in their bouquets.

Before leaving for a honeymoon in the south the bride changed into a Sheddack dress and jacket ensemble in Dresden blue fine wool crepe. She wore a matching blue organza petalled hat and peau de sole shoes and leather bag on tone and a white gardenia corsage.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Hollick will make their home at 7086 Brentwood Drive, Brentwood.

The forthcoming marriage is announced of Barbara Maude, only daughter of Mrs. John Hill and the late Mr. Hill, 1485 Hillside Avenue, to Mr. Roderick John Kathrens, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Kathrens, 2519 Fernwood Road. The wedding will take place Saturday, August 8 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Alban's Anglican Church with Rev. C.D. Blencoe officiating.

Annual Piano Recital

An interesting recital was given recently at St. Peter's Church Hall, when pupils of Mrs. Hilda King, with guest artists, provided a varied musical program.

Two piano and piano duets were featured. The pianists were Jimmy Brown, Judith and Adele Faryon, Ian Franklin, Jim Furmston, Paulette Howard, Robbie Hughes, Alexander Hunter, Wendy McCague, Maryann MacLean, Pam, Ian and Jamie MacLean, Patsy McLeman, Coleen Ray, Bruce Turkington and Leslie Woodland.

There were vocalists also in trio and solo. They were: Daniel Barrett, Jim Furmston, Rosalind Franklin, Joan Harding, Michelle Jefferson, Jane Lavoie, Wendy McCague, Don McCormick and Carol Whitaker.

Guest artists were Rosalind Franklin in solo violin, and Ian Franklin in cello solo, with Ian accompanying for his sister, and Jim Furmston for Ian.

Winners of Music Festival certificates this spring were: Ian Franklin, Rosalind Franklin, Jim Furmston (4), Joan Harding (2), Paulette Howard, Wendy McCague (3), Don McCormick, Maryann MacLean, Patsy McLeman and Bruce Turkington. Those successful in examinations of the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto were: Adele Faryon, Ian Franklin, Jim Furmston (2), Wendy McCague (3), Maryann MacLean (2) and Patsy McLeman.

PERSONAL MENTION

The Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Peakes will attend and officially open the exhibit of the graphic art of Chief Mungo Martin, in Thunderbird House, third floor of the Hudson's Bay Company. Later that afternoon His Honor will open the new municipal hall of Central Saanich.

That evening His Honor and Mrs. Peakes will attend the Jerry Gosley Smile Show at the Oak Bay Junior High School.

To Marry July 11

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Whiteley, 2514 Iona Drive, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Barbara Frances, to Mr. Horst Hans-Joachim Holst, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Holst, Luback, Germany. The wedding will take place Saturday, July 11, at 6 p.m. in Hope Lutheran Church with Rev. L. M. Carlson officiating.

Here From London

Miss Sheila Hilliard arrived from London recently to stay with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Hilliard, 75 Linden Avenue. She was met at Banff by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Arthur of McClure Street, who drove her west through the Rockies. En route they stopped at points of interest and visited friends and relatives in Salmon Arm and North Surrey. Miss Hilliard is a florist artist and plans to stay in Canada for two years.

Anniversary Party

A number of residents from Ontario are in town this weekend to attend the celebrations marking the diamond anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. Edward F. Church, 2705 Tudor Avenue, married June 29, 1904. Among them are Miss Amy E. Church, Smith's Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Church, Renfrew; Mr. and Mrs. J. Church, Toronto; Mrs. O. Sawyer, Mitchell; Mr. H. A. L. Anderson, St. Mary's; Mr. and Mrs. G. Arthur, and Mrs. W. Arthur and Mrs. W. Hodge, twin sisters of Mrs. Church who were her bridesmaids 60 years ago, all of Exeter.

Other out-of-town guests are Mrs. Grace Schilling, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. R. Burns, Minot, N.D.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Cline, Seattle, and Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Church and family, Tacoma, Wash.

Here for Wedding

Among the many out-of-town guests attending the wedding of Miss Sara Keenleyside and Mr. Gordon Jackson, Saturday afternoon were Rev. and Mrs. J. A. McCullum, Dawson City, Yukon; Mrs. M. Alev, Ottawa; Dr. and Mrs. M. H. A. Keenleyside, London, Ont.; Dr. and Mrs. Richard Van Cleave and Miss Lucinda Van Cleave of Seattle, Wash.

Blush Pink Gown Worn By Sara Keenleyside

An exquisite chapel-length gown of blush pink peau de sole in empire-line style and featuring lily point sleeves was chosen by Sara Lynn Keenleyside for her marriage yesterday afternoon in St. John's Anglican Church to Mr. Gordon Cameron Jackson.

Her three-tier veil, pouffed to elbow-length from a coronet of iridescent crystals. Pink toned roses and rosebuds and ivy were in her bouquet.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hugh L. Keenleyside, 3470 Mayfair Drive. The groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jackson of Glasgow, Scotland.

Baskets of white, pink and blue blossoms decorated the church for the ceremony which was performed by Rev. J. A. McCullum of Dawson City, Yukon. Dr. Keenleyside gave his daughter in marriage.

Wedding music included "Now Thank We All Our God" as prelude and singing of "My Prayer" by Pat Patterson during signing of the register.

Street-length, sleeveless, A-line gowns of blue French candy floss organza over cornflower blue tulle with shoes on tone were choice of matron of honor, Mrs. J. A. McCullum, Dawson City, sister of the bride; bridesmaid, Mrs. S. Segal, North Vancouver, another sister, and Mrs. M. H. A. Keenleyside, London, Ont., her sister-in-law. Similar gowns of white organza over tulle worn by junior bridesmaid, Miss Katherine Segal and flower girl, Miss Elizabeth Segal, the bride's nieces.

Bracelet Gifts From the Bride

Wrought iron baskets filled with salmon colored gladiolus, anemones and Easter lilies decorated St. John's Anglican church for the wedding of Sharon Louise Page and Mr. Ronald Brian Prior.

Rev. Canon George Biddle officiated at the evening ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Page, 2700 Hamilton Road and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Prior, 194 West Burnside.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her floor length gown of white chamois lace over tulle with long sleeves and full skirt. An overskirt of pearl de sole swept into a long train. Her four tiered scalloped veil was held by a pearl tiara and she carried a cascade of yellow roses, white carnations and ivy. Her pearls were a gift from the groom.

Miss Jo-Ann Halfhide was maid of honor and Mrs. R. Empey and Mrs. H. Dawson were bridesmaids.

They wore waist length dresses of yellow chiffon over tulle and yellow lace jackets. Yellow chiffon roses and tulle formed their headpieces. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of yellow roses and white gladiolus and the others carried small cascades of white gladiolus. Their yellow crystal three-strand bracelets were a gift from the bride.

Mr. David Green was best man and showing guests to the pews were Mr. Dallas Middleton, and Mr. Michael Galle.

A reception was held in the Ellis Hall where Mr. T. C. Hamilton gave the toast to the bride.

For a honeymoon trip to the Mainland the bride changed into an Italian knit two-piece dress with hat and gloves all in shocking pink.

The newlyweds will live in Victoria.

"Roll out the barrel—let's have a barrel of fun." For party time Italy's fastest-rising star in the fashion firmament, Princess Marcela Borghese of Rome, presents this startlingly simple cocktail dress in ebony wool knit. Eye-catching features of the design are the waist-low side openings which finish in a little bow, and cockades which perch on the shoulder.—(Giro di Grandi Associates, Italia)

Previews Begin Today

Uninhibited Fashions for Winter

NEW YORK (AP)—Uninhibited is probably the one word that described the largest number of new designs to be worn by daring and rich women next winter.

Challenged to find a variety of ways to say this are more than 100 visiting members of the U.S. Fashion Press, here for Eleanor Lambert's American Design series of press previews beginning today.

Not will the task be any easier for the reporters attending the second week of style previews beginning July 5 and arranged by Kittle Campbell, director of the New York couture group.

Some of the stars on the program for the first week include Christian Dior—New York, Anne Fogarty, Oleg Cassini, Adele Simpson, Cecil Chapman, Rudolph Gerreich, Pauline Trigere, Sarmi, Jane Derby, Jean Louis and Norman Norell.

The next week's parade of designs include the collections of couturiers Donald Brooks, Anne Klein, Anthony Blotta, Hattie Carnegie, Teal Traina, Samuel Winston, Larry Aldrich, Bill Blass and Jacques Tiffeneau.

There will be all this and hats, shoes, jewelry, handbags, and children's clothes to be previewed to the working press.

Necklines down to there, or no bodice at all, hem-lines up to here; legs in stockings patterned like the tattooed lady; bias-cut gowns over unshackled figures; flounces, plumbage and gaudy furs from the heyday of Hollywood's 1930s; harem pants and trousers—these are the exclamation points in next season's fashion stories.

But just as uninhibited are the costumes without built-in sensationalism. Among day time dresses are easy shifts, or sheaths with belts under the bosom or around the hip-line leaving the waist-line free to expand with a desert at lunch. Or they snap or tie at the side, like kimono to protect expensive hairdos.

Once criticized for covering curls under a kerchief, women now can plan to go to the charity ball in them if they want to, for the scarf has been made acceptable by cutting it from velvet or lame and calling it a hat.

Or they can wear pyjamas or lacy black negligees. The differences between these once strictly lingerie items and the long satin culottes or filmy lace discotheque dresses are hardly noticeable.

A year ago a lady on a plane wearing trousers and a manish jacket might have raised conservative eyebrows. But since Norman Norell introduced them, other designers have picked up the campaign for absolute comfort for the travelling women.

Even Oleg Cassini, famous for his figure-hugging costumes for women, has reversed himself with some mannish costumes for the lady who seeks equal right to their smartness.

Mrs. W. Snape Heads Group

Mrs. Winifred Snape has been elected president of the Studio Group of the Victoria Musical Art Society.

Also elected to office for the coming year were Miss Lorna Langley, vice-president; Mrs. Opal Campbell, secretary; Peter Gaupp, treasurer; Mrs. Julia Hunt, program convener; Larry Forbes, assistant program convener; Miss Yvonne Muir, publicity convener; and Miss Allison Marshall, membership convener.

"DAGWOOD"

Get a man or growing younger in the house with a "Dagwood" appetite! They'll go for this sandwich. On a slice of toast which has been spread with mayonnaise, arrange slices of fresh tomato. Cover with about eight whole anchovies and top with egg salad. Press second slice of toast firmly on top and serve with a cold beverage.

Leading Role In the Home

By JEAN SHARP

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—A woman must continue to play a leading role in the household, a panelist told delegates to the triennial Federated Women's Institutes of Canada meeting.

During a panel discussion, Mrs. John A. McLean of Eureka, N.S., said:

"We must, in our society, return to thinking that a woman's role in adulthood is that of mother and homemaker first, then she can pursue a career.

"It is too early as yet to evaluate what the true effect of so many working mothers will be on our children," she said, noting that mothers are unlikely to be replaced by automation.

WORK FOR COUNTRY

Mrs. E. J. Roylance of Greenwood, B.C., national honorary president, said "women have reached out to establish organizations through which they can work together." She urged the 530 delegates to work for their country and their organization.

Delegates were asked to support the work of International Co-operation Year by Dr. J. Roby Kidd of Ottawa, chairman of the Canadian ICY committee.

"ICY took root through the energy and pressure of Canadian women," he said. "In the months since, India and Canada and representatives of 26 other countries have been planning International Co-operation Year 1965, to coincide with the 20th birthday of the United Nations."

"ICY should be used for a long, sober look at what we have done and where we have failed. ICY should be the means of rallying more support for tasks already undertaken."

Heads WI's

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP)—Mrs. Philip Matheson of Oyster Bed Bridge, P.E.I., was elected national president of the Federated Women's Institute of Canada Thursday at the five-day triennial convention here.

Mrs. Matheson, wife of the Prince Edward Island minister of highways and public works, succeeds Mrs. James Haggerty of Nanaimo, B.C.

Win Prizes

Esquimalt Women's Institute held a flower demonstration recently and prizes were won by Mrs. A. McVie, most original; Mrs. G. Taylor, color variety; and Mrs. S. Boyle, best rose arrangement.

Two members, Mrs. M. Carver and Miss Elliott, who are going to England shortly, were presented with dogwood pins by Mrs. J. Hodnett, president.

Mrs. E. Johns and Mrs. B. Collis of the Victoria WI were present.

TOP KNOT SECRETS By Joan Fraser Well-Known Fashion Show Co-Ordinator

I taxed my brain and scratched my well-colored head trying to decide what to write about this week. Suddenly it was plain as the hair on my head, and here it is: short and sweet, because that's the kind of hair cut I have from MARGO'S. A professional haircut is the basis of easy to manage hair. For this sunny carefree time of year when everything and everybody moves outdoors — nothing looks younger than short hair. It takes the screaming genius of MARGO'S stylists to accomplish this particular look. Casual coiffures will fall right into place with the run of a comb, or the flick of a brush when the scissors wiggle at MARGO'S have skillfully shaped and tapered your tresses. Made an appointment today at MARGO'S for carefree haircare. Better still make two and take your daughter along so she too can enjoy a stay-at-home hair-do with a minimum of effort.

Hairstyles All Same On Riviera

PARIS (Reuters) — Summer holiday clothes on the French Riviera are striking this year for their similarity.

Every female, from six to 60, appears to have adopted the new Chanel hairstyles, tunics and pyjamas.

In a land where, until a few years ago, individuality was the keynote of women's clothes, conformity has taken over.

Mass production has, indeed, won the widest acceptance in France in the sphere of summer holiday clothes. The big national chain stores are quick to capitalize on the dictates of current fashion and identical check gingham shirts, printed cotton tunics and transparent voile beach coats are on sale at chain stores on the Riviera coast.

At Cannes, a statistical count on one day proved that the "look alike" trend has reached a pinnacle in hairstyles.

A double christening will take place this morning at Cadboro Bay United Church when Rev. E. F. Church baptizes his two great-grandchildren, Robert Thomas Fitzsimmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fitzsimmons, Niagara Falls, Ont., and Kelly Lynn Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Curtis, Victoria. The babies are pictured with their mothers, Mrs. Fitzsimmons at left and Mrs. Curtis, right. Kelly Lynn's godparents are Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Curtis, Ganana, and Mr. E. A. Allen, Vancouver. Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fitzsimmons are holding a luncheon at their Cadboro Bay Road home in honor of the occasion.—(Jim Ryan)

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. De Laney, 2951 Eastdowne Road, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Elaine Patricia, to Mr. Geoffrey Frank Eacott, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Eacott, 3558 Richmond Road. The wedding will take place Saturday, July 18 at 8 p.m. in St. Mary's Anglican Church, with Rev. Canon F. C. Vaughn-Birch officiating. Mr. Eacott is a 1963 graduate of University of British Columbia.—(Miss De Laney's photo by Jus-Rite and Mr. Eacott's by Campbell)

Legion Auxiliary Donated $219,313

The Ladies Auxiliary to Pacific Command of the Royal Canadian Legion donated $219,313.42 to Legion and many non-Legion causes last year.

Over and above the actual cash, countless hours of service were performed. Mrs. Dorothy Cowan of Vernon, B.C., showed in her annual report today, 1,427 hours were spent at the blood clinic in Vancouver alone, 13,494 hours visiting hospitals and 743 social service counsels held.

The 1,655 member group gives support to all phases of Legion work, often becoming the backbone of the branch, but still manages to find time to assist a vast variety of community efforts outside the Legion.

Tour Europe on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. David Fredrick Laing Dawson who were married in Metropolitan United Church left by air after the wedding for Copenhagen and to spend ten weeks touring Europe. On their return they will live in Vancouver where the groom will resume his study of medicine at the University of British Columbia.

Rev. F. E. H. James performed the double-ring ceremony for the former Maureen Anne Tilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Tilson, Tokoroa, New Zealand and the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Dawson, 1200 Union Street.

Mr. Tilson came from New Zealand for the wedding and to give his daughter in marriage.

For her wedding the bride wore a white peau de soie Empire sheath she designed herself. A separate back panel of satin, heavily embroidered with sequins and pearls, swept into a train. A beaded satin crown held her styled shoulder-length veil and she carried garlands surrounded with white bebes gladiolus.

Miss Maureen Hemming was maid of honor, Mrs. A. G. Olliphant, bridesmatron and the Misses Caroline Nip and Linda Jean McLean, bridesmaids.

The maid of honor wore a plum-colored satin sheath and the other attendants wore the same style in rose pink satin. Their headresses were a single rose and veiling and all carried crescent bouquets of white bebes gladiolus.

Mr. James W. Hawthorne was best man and showing guests to their pews were Mr.

John Dawson, Mr. Anthony Hopkins, Mr. Douglas Nico and Mr. James Moore.

The reception was held at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel where the toast was proposed by Mr. John Campbell.

When the couple left for Europe, the bride was wearing a yellow linen suit, high collar of stiffened black organza and black accessories. Her carriage was a gardenia.

Christ Church Garden Party

Christ Church Cathedral grounds will be the setting for the annual garden party, sponsored by the Women's Parish Guild, on Saturday, July 4. Mrs. George R. Pearkes will open the affair at 2 p.m.

Guests will be welcomed by Mrs. Brian Whitlow, honorary president, and Mrs. C. C. Risch, guild president.

There will be fun for all ages at the gala affair, including music, games and refreshments. There will also be stalls for home cooking, knitted goods, novelties, aprons, superfluties, flowers and plants and pictures by a local artist.

The James Bay stall will also feature home cooking, sewing and novelties.

Another highlight of the afternoon will be a puppet show for the children.

Men in the congregation will look after the games, assisted by the servers, Scouts and Guides.

Tea will be served in the gymnasium.

Unitarians Net $32

Ladies of the Unitarian Church were entertained at two coffee parties last week at the home of Mrs. Marvin Evans, 508 Deal Street.

An informal sale of clothing for adults and children netted $32.68 for the church building fund. Surplus articles will be sold at the Church picnic to be held at Sea Bluff Farm on Sunday.

Guests were: Miss Doris Armstrong, Mrs. Fred Baker, Mrs. N. Campbell, Mrs. P. Cowley, Mrs. John Dickman, Mrs. Paul Gareau, Miss Olive Garrood, Mrs. M. Hall, Mrs. C. Horne, Mrs. H. Lear, Mrs. E. Lockley, Mrs. John Lowther, Mrs. James Mair, Mrs. Allen Milne, Mrs. S. Ottmann, Mrs. Alex Purvis, Mrs. P. Salmon, Mrs. Blayne Scott, Mrs. Ronald Tribe, Mrs. Henry Schmidt, Mrs. C. S. Yarwood.

THIS GOOD LIFE

This good life may be identified by a camping trip, a new hit play, or a quiet evening at home. But here in Canada it is really much more than these or other material things.

More than anything else, the good life is brought about by the freedom to choose your own way. This freedom, which is yours for every decision from a brand of fishing tackle to your choice of a career, makes life rich and exciting.

And what provides the information for your choices in material things? Probably advertising. It tells you what is available... makes even the everyday choices interesting and fun.

Advertising is information. So long as our mental appetites are stimulated by the freedom of choice offered through advertising, we will continue to be an alert, progressive nation.

WINNING CONTRACT

By HOWARD SCHREKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Bridge Quiz:

This week, our quiz consists entirely of preemptive situations from the recent World Bridge Olympiad in New York. In each case, a famous player had either to contend with an opposing pre-emptive or consider the advisability of making a preemptive himself. Measure your judgment against these stars.

Answers to Bridge
Quiz:

a. Three no trump was the answer found by Robert Jordan for U.S.A. in the match against Britain. The bid was risky, but it succeeded, for although Jordan found partner with little more than a fair share of points, he made his contract with an overtrick. His British counterpart, Boris Schapiro, passed in the same situation and declared three spades by four tricks, not bound by the result was a valuable swing to U.S.A.

b. Four spades was the bid by the Israeli player, Zeev Duchenov, against Italy. Opposed by the star
Italian pair, Benito Garozzo and Pietro Forquet, Duchenov had every reason to suppose that they would reach a fine contract if left alone. He therefore bid his hand to the limit and beyond. The Italians were unable to exchange adequate information and later had to decide whether to double the Israelis in six spades or to bid seven clubs. They guessed wrong, bid seven with an ace missing; were doubled and set one trick.

c. Four spades was Italian Star Giorgio Belandona's solution. Arthur Robinson for U.S.A. would have had an easy ride in four hearts (which was, incidentally, not double four spades and had to bid a risky five hearts. Aided by a defensive slip, they made it.

d. One spade was Belandona's choice this time. This should have worked poorly, for the Americans reached a three no trump contract which they could have made, but which was, in fact, defeated. Victor Mitchell for U.S.A. opened with four diamonds, a transfer bid, equivalent to a four spade hand which has almost interest if partner is strong. Mitchell eventually finished in four spades doubled, down two.

e. Six hearts was Mitchell's winning answer. He knew partner's hearts must be good enough, but he was somewhat worried about spade control. Seeing no advantage in putting pressure on partner with a tempting bid, he shot the slam, which Stayman easily made for a big swing.

f. One spade was preferred by the British star, Terence Reese, to the alternative bid of three spades.
Reese hoped that the vulnerability of the dealer opponents from competing if it came out that the hand was one on which both sides could make a score. He settled in two spades, just making; while the Italians opened three at the other table and were set one trick.

Picture Worth 1,000 Words In This Case

By DON GAIN

Sailors aboard the Russian freighter Dekabrist at Ogden Point are getting their second look at Victoria this year—she loaded grain here in February.

The wartime Liberty ship will take about 9,000 tons. Each crewman had a smattering of English and my Russian is limited to "da" and "nyet." This is what happened:

"Come back, talk captain," said the ship's doctor, Dimitri Mikhelev.

I did better with deckhand Ivan Bataykan but we soon lapsed into nothing. "You talk too fast," he said. I tried talking more slowly but this didn't help either.

"I study English in school," Ivan said, which is more than I can say in Russian.

COMMON GROUND

"You play football here?" asked one sailor.

"Yes," said Ivan.

"What team are you playing?" I asked.

"No understand," he replied. Further talk convinced me I was on the wrong track.

"Second navigator come," said Ivan. "He speak English."

Georgi Galtshinsky finally appeared and we all went into a small mess where two other sailors were playing cards. We sat at a table under photographs of Lenin and Khrushchev.

STILL TOUGH

The going was still tough. "What do you think of Victoria?" I asked Georgi.

"Yes," he replied. I turned to another and asked the same question.

"Yes," was the reply. Finally I managed to get through to Georgi.

"Well. Well. Good," he said. "Wonderful town," said Ivan. He started to say something else but the doctor interrupted him.

Conscience Won Out

WEST VANCOUVER (CP)—Beverly Turner of North Vancouver, who admitted taking money from a shop last April but couldn't bring herself to spend it, received a suspended sentence in police court Thursday. She returned the money to the shop.

Himalayan Rescue Involves Canadians

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (CP)—A Pakistani liaison officer had to be rescued from a mountain ledge while the first Canadian Himalayan expedition explored possible routes to the top of its objective, Hachinder Kish.

B.C.-born Dr. Fred Root, the expedition leader, says the rescue occurred June 18. The expedition includes two Islanders, Nanaimo geologist John Ricker, 28, and Courtney engineer Donald Poole, 28.

Top Tourist Family On Return Visit

A quick glimpse of Victoria as they passed through hurriedly two years ago brought Californians Mr. and Mrs. George Little back to the city yesterday.

And as the couple headed for Victoria on the ferry from Tsawwassen, they were chosen as Tourists of the Week by Jaycee Terry Nex and his Jaycee-wife, Helen.

Each week, visitors to Vancouver Island are selected by the Jaycees for VIP treatment to promote Victoria as an ideal tourist spot.

Mr. and Mrs. Little, from Berkeley, Calif. were treated to "Vladivostok is better," he said. "We have many people, many ships, busy port," Georgi said. "Victoria wonderful," Ivan resumed. "but Vladivostok better. My home. I have wife and son."

"Why you want?" one of them asked.

"I take your picture," I said. "Nyet," said the doctor. And that was that.

Noted Actor Dies at 89

Clement May, known as Australia's greatest character actor for many years and formerly of Sydney, Vancouver Island, has died in Sydney, Australia, at 89.

Well-known by many Victorians and Islanders, Mr. May was born in an Australian gold-mining town.

He travelled on five continents with a one-man show in which he played Dickens characters in full costume.

After more than 60 years on the stage, Mr. May, who started out as a comedy singer, retired in Sydney several years ago.

Last Wish Fulfilled For Retired Farmer, 96

Boer War veteran John James Abbott, 96, died Friday fulfilling his last wish.

Born and raised in Higham Ferrers, Northamptonshire, Mr. Abbott served with the British Army Medical Corps during the South African war and came to Canada in 1908.

In 1911, he bought a farm near Grenfell, Sask., where he lived until his retirement to Victoria in 1937, though he kept the farm under management.

Mr. Abbott was a well-known singer, boxer and county cricketer.

SOLD THE FARM

When he sold the farm a few weeks ago, Mr. Abbott said he wished to see it again before it was too late. So, last week, accompanied by his daughter and son-in-law, he flew to Grenfell to fulfil this wish. It proved to be his last wish.

Mr. Abbott leaves his widow, May, at 15 Cambridge Road, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Yule.

Alberni Unions Get Food, Cash From Victoria

A truckload of groceries and funds set up for Alberni workers by their unions or the B.C. Federation of Labor.

A truck was loaded with donations in both groceries and cash donated by rank-and-file members of Victoria union locals to a fund set up for the approximately 4,500 workers idled by the office workers' strike.

FIRMS HELP

The campaign was organized by William Gauld, Victoria representative of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Woodward's Stores and the Hudson's Bay Company shipped in with six cases of groceries each and Dowell's Cartage donated the truck.

In all, the truck contained 31 cases of canned or packaged groceries plus seven big cases of frozen meats, berries and fruits, and bakery goods.

DEFENCE FUND

With the truck went almost $2,000 in cash or cheques donated by Victoria union members.

Mr. Gauld went with the truck which was driven by teamsters' union business agent Robert Milliken.

Mr. Gauld said Victoria unions also are contributing, through their regional offices, to defence

Mainland Feels Slowdown

VANCOUVER (CP)—More than 2,000 workers at three Vancouver lumber plants are refusing to work overtime in support of striking office workers at Alberni and Port Alberni.

The action by members of the International Woodworkers of America at the Canadian White Pine, Vancouver Plywood and Red Band Shingle divisions of the MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River complex has hit production, maintenance and routine stock-taking.

Representatives of unions holding contracts with MacMillan decided last Wednesday to implement a work-to-rule policy in company operations to support the office workers. They also agreed no more overtime should be worked by members and full financial support would be given the strikers.

Civil Rights Men

Searchers Comb River

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (UPI)—A search for three missing Civil Rights workers shifted Saturday to the Pearl River, the same river in which a lynch mob dumped the body of accused Negro rapist Mack Charles Parker five years ago.

Four boats, manned by local officers and FBI agents, moved out on the river this morning to grapple for the bodies of the three integrationists, who vanished six days ago.

The three — Andrew Goodman, 20, of New York; Mickey Schwerner, 24, of Brooklyn, and James Chaney, a 21-year-old Meridian, Miss., Negro — were participating in the "Mississippi Project," a summer-long desegregation drive, at the time of their disappearance.

THREE ARRESTED

FBI agents arrested three white men Friday for threatening two other young northern "project" workers who were passing out Negro voter registration literature in Itta Bena, Miss.

All three of the suspects were brought before a U.S. commissioner in Oxford Saturday and ordered to stand trial on charges of conspiring to injure and intimidate the youths, Roy Bernard Turkington, 24, of Berkeley, Calif., and John Lyon Paul, 21, of Oxnard, N.Y.

ONE CLEARED

Accused in the case are Meritt Ely Randle, 45, James E. Hodges, 30, and Lawrence Neal McGraw, 37, all residents of the Itta Bena Mississippi Delta area.

U.S. Commissioner Omar Craig cleared McGraw of a charge of threatening to kill the two northerners, but said there was "probable cause" for the charges against the other two.

All three will stand trial on the intimidation charges.

More FBI Sent In

Bennett Declares:

B.C. Would Be First In New Health Plan

KELOWNA (CP)—Premier Bennett said Saturday his government will co-operate 100 per cent in any federal effort to put the Hall royal commission report on health into effect.

Speaking at the official opening of a new vocational school here, the premier said he hopes B.C. will be the first province to put into operation the recommendation of the commission for a prepaid national health insurance plan.

Referring to the proposed Bank of British Columbia — a bill for its incorporation is now before parliament — the premier said it was as important to this province as any industry.

FASTER DEALS

With the headquarters of the bank in this province he said business decisions and financial transactions would be speeded up. At present B.C. was about the only place in the world where banking headquarters were so far removed — they are all in eastern Canada.

The premier also referred briefly to the Peace River power project and told his listeners that the $500,000 development along with the Columbia River project would result in the greatest power availability anywhere in the world.

SURPLUS POWER

Close to 3,000,000 horsepower could be developed from the two projects, he said. Power from the Peace would be surplus for a time.

Provincial Education Minister Leslie Peterson said that "the skills of our people are our most valuable resource." One of the essential ingredients was to have a highly-trained and versatile labor force and the provincial education department was striving to give the people the means toward this end by such methods as new vocational schools.

Redcoats Won't Come

LONDON (UPI) — A 200-year-old law empowering Prime Minister Douglas Home to send British redcoats to put down "tumults" in America is scheduled for repeal by Parliament this summer, possibly by July 4.

It is one of many obsolete laws that Parliament is scheduled to repeal before the general election in October.

The law was enacted in 1796. It warns the American colonists against rebellion and authorizes the British government to put down "tumults and insurrections of the most dangerous nature."

First Bullets Loosed In St. Augustine

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Violence broke out again in St. Augustine Saturday night, and for the first time bullets were used.

One 22-year-old white man was wounded in both legs with shotgun pellets as he rode in the back of a truck near a Negro home.

Later, a Negro home in the same area was reported fired on.

Two white youths said their car was shot at by Negroes. Just a little after that, Negroes said their car was fired on by whites.

The only injury reported was to the youth in the pickup truck, Thomas Schmides. His injuries were not serious.

Reinforcements arrived Saturday to push to 230 the number of state law enforcement officers stationed in this racially-torn city to maintain order.

Governor Farris Bryant ordered more men after an on-the-scene inspection and conferences with state law officers.

"I did not find much progress toward a solution," he said.

Shastri

Successor To Nehru Stricken

By CONRAD FINE

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A month after Prime Minister Nehru's death, illness that an aide called a mild heart attack has felled his successor in India's leadership, Lal Bahadur Shastri.

The 50-year-old prime minister was bedfast Saturday, and the nation faced the possibility of another leadership crisis. Physicians ordered all Shastri's engagements cancelled and treated him for what they called overstrain and a slight fever.

"There is no cause for anxiety," the government's All-India radio said in a nationwide broadcast.

Mindful of the emotional impact of Nehru's illness and death on the Indian people, a government spokesman reiterated this end by such methods as new vocational schools.

day night and said the prime minister was rested and cheerful.

HEART ATTACK

A top aide of Shastri — a highly placed informant who preferred not to be identified by name — told The Associated Press that Shastri, who survived a serious heart ailment five years ago, suffered a mild heart attack at 10 p.m. Friday. He said a team of doctors instituted emergency treatment to prevent further damage.

The family at first denied this, then retracted the denial. A government official, at a news conference, refused to confirm or deny that Shastri was again a heart patient.

Shastri's son Hari said "timely precautions prevented a recurrence of the 1959 heart attack" which left him near death and unconscious for hours.

Refinery Fire Battled Without Water Pressure

SASKATOON (CP) — Firemen prevented a possible major disaster early Saturday as this city of 110,000 struggled through water and power disruptions and a fierce electrical storm.

The city was without water for two hours after a 24-inch mainline water main ruptured.

Fire broke out in the Royal, its Oil Company Limited refinery in the southwest corner of the city while there was no water pressure. About 20,000 gallons of gasoline products were stored nearby in tanks.

Flames shot from a five on top of a 130-foot tower for almost two hours before they were flushed out by steam from the refinery's boilers.

Firemen pumped more than 3,000 gallons of water from tanker trucks into the boilers to raise the steam.

Plant Superintendent J. Ross Davidson warned firemen that the whole place could blow up but there was no evacuation of nearby homes.

WIND, HAIL DAMAGE

Lightning caused several fires throughout the area and there were reports of extensive wind and hail damage.

Rainfall amounted to about 35 inches.

The water main broke near the city's major pumping station in west-central Saskatoon, flooding the area with about four feet of water. Water pressure dropped to 22 pounds from 100.

An official at St. Paul's Hospital said it was necessary to use distilled water to finish an emergency operation during the water shortage.

Lightning caused major damage to the clubhouse at the Riverside Golf and Country Club. A granary on a farm north of the city was destroyed by fire after a lightning strike.

Power lines were down throughout the city and surrounding areas.

Camper Mishap Kills Woman

SPENCER BRIDGE (CP) — Mrs. John B. Tompkins was killed Saturday night when she fell from the floor of a truck camper unit as the family started out on a holiday trip from Vancouver.

Police said the woman was thrown to the road when the door of the camper unit opened on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Storm Turns Party Into Panic

MONTREAL (UPI)—Canada's largest city yesterday counted up the cost of its "biggest party ever": One dead, hundreds injured, about $65,000 spent on fire works, and other entertainment cut short by rain.

The rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, chopped off the party in honor of St. Jean Baptiste, French Canada's patron saint, about 10 p.m. Friday.

The dead and the injured resulted from a wild rush by thousands of French-Canadian celebrants to the only exit off St. Helen's Island, site of the party, opposite downtown Montreal.

The party-goers, estimated to number from 125,000 to 150,000, jammed the 50-foot approach leading to Jacques Bridge and the city proper where they had left their cars, while police exhorted them to be orderly.

Although powerboats and rowboats were sent to the island, some 75 persons fainted before relief could arrive while others were trampled into the mud.

Ambulances took off some of those fainted but, delayed

by a mass of pedestrians, inched their way across the bridge which spans the St. Lawrence River, the world's longest inland waterway.

Provincial, city and harbor police manned boats to evacuate some 400 suffering from bruises, broken bones and cuts in the intolerable squeeze.

The recreation hall at the island's swimming pool was converted into a makeshift hospital and volunteer St. John Ambulance members moved through the crowd helping expectant mothers and children.

Police said the press was so great that one youth was knocked into the fast-flowing river. He was hauled out by harbor police.

The rescue work was complicated by the fact the bridge, which links Montreal to the south shore, had been closed to traffic early in the evening. Extra police and ambulances on the island on which Montreal is located, could only build-down their way across the bridge.

Diefenbaker:

'STOP STUDY AT ONCE!'

OTTAWA (CP)—Opposition leader Diefenbaker Saturday night demanded an immediate end to a study by federal officials of what he called "the ramifications of the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada."

In a strongly-worded statement, Mr. Diefenbaker accused Prime Minister Pearson of contradictions. He asserted the government has accepted the possibility of dividing Canada by initiating the study.

Mr. Diefenbaker's statement stemmed from remarks by the Prime Minister in the Commons Friday and a news release he issued Friday night.

REPLY ASKED

In the Commons, Mr. Pearson was asked by Reid Scott, NDP member for Toronto Danforth, for a reply to his question of May 28. He had asked whether the government would consider a study of the economic, social and political effects of Quebec's separation from Canada.

Replied Mr. Pearson: "We have been considering the matter." And he added: "It is not a subject which lends itself to easy investigation and dogmatic conclusions, but officials of the government are making that kind of investigation now."

Later Mr. Pearson issued a statement saying that his answers in the Commons "seem to have been misunderstood."

He said: "What I have said for is not a study based on the possibility of the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada" but "a study of the economic inter-relationships between the parts of our country."

Mr. Diefenbaker's statement said that "such a study gives official countenance to separatism." It leads to a movement not acceptable to the overwhelming majority of Canadians—including those in Quebec—"an importance it does not deserve."

NOT APPROPRIATE

He said such action is "a devastating commentary on the government's failure in the field of federal-provincial relations."

The Conservative leader asserted: "The division of Canada by the removal of Quebec cannot be considered an appropriate subject by an official committee of the federal government."

AWL in Cyprus

Missing Soldiers Turn Up

NICOSIA (Reuters)—Three British soldiers missing for more than 24 hours reported back for duty at 1 p.m. local time today, a United Nations spokesman said.

Fears for their safety had been growing, and search measures had been stepped up. The men failed to report for duty Friday morning.

NO NAMES

The UN spokesman said he would not release the soldiers' names and said the matter was now a question of military discipline.

He said they had in fact been absent without leave since 11 p.m. Thursday, although last seen leaving a Limassol night club about 7 a.m. Friday.

Invasion Feared

NICOSIA (UPI) — Greek Cypriots are making plans to attack Turkish Cypriot positions on the northwest coast, reviving the possibility of a Turkish invasion of the island, diplomats said Saturday.

In London, however, Turkish Prime Minister Ismet Inönü said that Turkey was planning any armed intervention in Cyprus at this time. Under provisions of the treaty granting the island independence, Turkey has the right to intervene to protect the Turkish minority on Cyprus.

Ship Leaves Docks After Union Truce

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Maritime Trustees set up as a watchdog for maritime unions in Canada.

Mr. Hope said the Seafarers' International Union had agreed to withhold these negotiations pending efforts by the trustees to create a single union representing ships officers in Canada.

At the same time officials of the Merchant Service Guild and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers' CLC had agreed to withhold attempts to conclude an agreement, respecting the officers.

A truce among the maritime unions involved was reached Friday night and loading of the ship began immediately.

She sailed for Alaska early Saturday from the suburban Surrey docks.

The truce was announced late Friday night by Allan Hope, executive director of the Board of

Summer Cabins Coming

Prosaic Future Faces Isle of Mystery

By LYNNE WALLER

NANAIMO — A paradise island which some say may hide the buried treasure of Brother XII has an uncertain future.

Ruxton Island in the DeCourcy group off Nanaimo is being subdivided by a local real estate firm which plans to sell summer cabins.

Brother XII was an English-born religious fanatic and swindler whose strange religious colony on Ruxton broke up in 1933 after about four years.

A dozen disillusioned colonists fled to the provincial police office here to tell a story of slavery, extortion and brutality—and there are some oldtimers who claim murder was involved, too.

Born either Julian Churton Skottowe or Arthur Edward Wilson, Brother XII was broke in Italy in the mid-1920s when he came up with a new faith based on "three truths."

They were learned, he said, after he journeyed to the spirit world to mingle with the great minds of history.

Whatever the truth of the matter, several affluent disciples—mainly Americans—believed Brother XII and flocked to his side, bringing lots of money. He died in Switzerland in 1934 after a court granted some of his ex-disciples a judgment of $65,000 against him—in absentia.

About $350,000 in gold coins was unaccounted for and it is believed some may be buried around the DeCourcys. All that was left to satisfy the $65,000 judgment was the islands, some property at Cedar and some half-wild goats.

Saltair historian Harry Olsen believes three things could have happened to the $350,000:

● Brother XII may have used it to bribe officials so he could get out of North America and into Europe ahead of the judgment and the ex-disciples.

● His brutal "queen," Mabel Skottowe, alias Zura de Valdes, alias Madam Zee, may have poisoned Brother XII for the loot and vanished with it.

● It may still be on the islands.

The local firm, Nanaimo Realty, is allowing only registered lot owners or those with

Service Course Completed

PORT ALBERNI — Sixteen local girls and women have completed an intensive course designed to qualify them for service as courteous, efficient waitresses.

In spite of the economic situation, in the strike-bound Alberni, approximately one-third of the class had been placed in jobs in Twin Cities hotels and restaurants by the final day of the 10-day course.

Instructor Edward Zemits, a catering manager who will conduct a similar course in Duncan soon, said the girls and women learn table setting, which wines to serve and at what temperature, and how to serve meals to please the customers.

They also learn the importance of a cheerful and courteous attitude and of being able to give accurate tourist information.

Two Big New Trollers Join Nanaimo's Fleet

NANAIMO—Two 42-foot West Island coast trollers rolled out of drydock this weekend to add to Nanaimo's fishing fleet.

Friday night at Withey's shipyard on Gabriola Island, Mrs. Les Bud cracked a bottle of champagne across the bow of one fishing vessel and named it Edna F. Her husband is the owner.

Saturday night Mrs. Stan Almas christened the Nina Ellen, her husband's new craft. Just completed at Western Marine Enterprises.

Withey's has been operating bay while the Nina Ellen is the for more than 20 years at Silver first ship built at Western Marine.

Mr. Almas said the Nina Ellen and the Edna F. are the fifth and sixth new fishing vessels to appear in the Nanaimo harbor this year. He attributed the rise in shipbuilding activity to the need for commercial fishermen to go farther afield.

He said earlier boats were too small for trips to the West Coast or the Gulf of Alaska area. Mr. Almas is already making plans for a fishing trip off the Oregon coast in the fall and a trip to the Gulf of Alaska in the spring when the season opens.

Nanaimo Merchants Speak Up

Inlet Area Not Alone In Needing Cleanup

NANAIMO—The Gordon Street-Commercial Inlet development project will have a clean "front door," but the merchants involved say they're not the only ones who should start a cleanup operation.

The comments followed a recent speech by Chamber of Commerce president Richard Bond, who urged merchants to change the "eyesore" caused by the back of their businesses, which will front on the project, into a tourist attraction.

"HOW ABOUT OTHERS?"

He suggested the Chamber ask the merchants, whose firms face west on Commercial Street, to beautify the back sections before the parking expansion project is completed.

"How about some of the other shacks in this town?" one merchant said yesterday.

"PREMATURITY"

"We're not the only ones. Gordon Street is not even finished yet—I'm waiting till it goes through and when it does I think the merchants will definitely do something."

Another business owner said he thought the request for a beautification scheme was "a

Alberni Unions Get Food, Cash From Victoria

A truckload of groceries and cash was delivered to strike-ridden labor union members in the Alberni yesterday from their fellow union members in Victoria.

A truck was loaded with donations in both groceries and cash donated by rank-and-file members of Victoria union locals to a fund set up for the approximately 4,500 workers idled by the office workers' strike.

DEFENCE FUND

With the truck went almost $2,000 in cash or cheques donated by Victoria union members.

Mr. Gould went with the truck which was driven by teamsters' union business agent Robert Milliken.

Mr. Gould said Victoria unions also are contributing, through their regional offices, to defence funds set up for Alberni workers by their unions or the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Mainland Feels Slowdown

VANCOUVER (CP)—More than 2,000 workers at three Vancouver lumber plants are refusing to work overtime in support of striking office workers at Alberni and Port Alberni.

The action by members of the International Woodworkers of America at the Canadian White Pine, Vancouver Plywood and Red Band Shingle divisions of the MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River complex has hit production, maintenance and routine stock-taking.

NEW TALKS

The move came as new talks between representatives of the company and the office employees' union concluded their first round here.

The talks, first in three weeks, ended without comment from either side. Both sides agreed to continue bargaining Monday.

WORK-TO-RULE

Representatives of unions holding contracts with Mac-Powell decided last Wednesday to implement a work-to-rule policy in company operations to support the office workers. They also agreed no more overtime should be worked by members and full financial support would be given the strikers.

Fire Blazes In Attic

Fire of unknown origin gutted the attic at the home of Wallace Bell, 537 Dunsin, yesterday morning.

Three units from the Victoria fire department had no trouble extinguishing the blaze.

St. Andrew's at Comox Now Century Old

Real founder Willemar

COURTENAY—Historical records of the Comox Valley show the Anglican parish of St. Andrew's was founded 100 years ago last Sunday.

But the historians admit the real founder of the Anglican church in the valley was Rev. Jules Xavier Willemar, a former Oblate missionary who was a man of strength, endurance and power.

In 1873, Mr. Willemar called a meeting after a Sunday service to discuss construction of a church to succeed the log structure built in 1864.

The Presbyterian group, refusing to talk business on the Sabbath, walked out and built a church on the top of nearby Mission Hill.

Mr. Willemar paid them no mind. He gathered his Anglicans around him and started up the slope of the hill to find a site.

"Let's sit down for a minute," said a stout matron. "I'm out of breath."

The vicar decided instantly: "Then this is where we will build our new church, so you can come to the services."

Mr. Willemar, head of the then-mission from 1871 until 1913, also was a man of resources.

As soon as the church was completed, he realized a bell was needed. He remembered the Australian ship Lady Blackwood had been wrecked on the west coast so he trekked over to salvage the ship's bell.

It still rings in St. Andrew's. Comox and environs were first settled in 1862, when reports of good land and lots of game brought a small group of men in a government-sponsored expedition.

Bishop George Hills arrived Oct. 25, 1862 and arranged for Rev. J. B. Good, then in charge of Nanaimo, to make regular visits. Mr. Good pre-empted 170 acres in the centre of the valley and fenced it—and the whole deal didn't cost much more than $170!

The St. Andrew's parish of the Comox mission was formally founded June 21, 1864, when the bishop chose the site of the log chapel and named Jordayne Cave-Brown-Cave as mission director.

Fourteen settlers gathered Aug. 25, 1864, to lay the foundation and put up the building.

From 1867 until Mr. Willemar arrived, lay readers held the services, except for a few months in 1869 when Rev. H. B. Owen took charge. He is remembered for bringing brick from Victoria by steamer and canoe, to repair the church.

French-born Mr. Willemar also built a parsonage, organized a day school and held services in Chibouk for the Indians. He travelled his big island parish by canoe, on horseback and on foot.

First expansion of services was to Dunsin Island in 1880 and, between then and 1914,

St. Andrew's: centre of century of worship services and later churches, came through the appearance of women's and young people's auxiliaries.

The land was being cleared in 1916 for construction of the present St. Andrew's. It stood pretty much as is until a recent remodelling and now it is being placed on a new foundation.

A belated 50th anniversary celebration in 1916 never was held. Bishop Scriven died during the night before it was to be held and oldtimers still remember the funeral procession.

Every flag in town was at halfmast, every telephone pole covered with black crepe.

The Comox Valley's land boom was ending in 1916. There was some expansion of the parish between the world wars but most of the growth of women's and young people's auxiliaries.

The land was being cleared in 1916 for construction of the present St. Andrew's. It stood pretty much as is until a recent remodelling and now it is being placed on a new foundation.

With the prosperity of recent years, growth of the parish has been large enough to cause plans for a separate parish in Courtenay. This city first conducted services in a store in 1896 and St. John's Church was built in 1914. Other ministers since Mr.

Willemar were Archdeacon E. P. Laycock, Rev. H. A. Collinson, Rev. J. W. Flinton, Rev. G. L. Bourdillon, Rev. F. C. Chapman, Rev. F. S. Henderson, Archdeacon R. Little, Rev. J. J. Van der Leest and the present rector, Rev. W. J. Lunny.

Mr. Lunny has made the collection of historical information about the parish into almost a second profession.

He has pictures of all the churches but needs photographs of two of the ministers, Mr. Owen, who served briefly in 1862, and Mr. Collinson, in charge from 1916 to 1918.

Hall Nears Completion With Cornerstone Rites

SHAWNIGAN LAKE—The new phase of construction of a $25,000 Royal Canadian Legion hall near here began yesterday when members of the Malahat branch held a cornerstone ceremony.

The stone, made by Allan Dibbs of the Malahat branch, was cemented into place by Alex Walker of Mill Bay, past Dominion Legion president.

The hall, on the highway between Mill Bay and Shawnigan Lake, will be completed this year by volunteer labor given by the branch's 40 members. Building committee chairman is A. J. Simard.

Victorians have read about the recent closures on the Alaska Highway due to unseasonable snowfall but few will know that a city group was involved.

We were on a round trip—bus-train-boat-and-bus trip—from Victoria to Alaska and had arrived at Fort Nelson on the B.C. stretch of the Alaska Highway without undue incident. Our next stop was at Watson Lake just over the Yukon border.

When we left Fort Nelson at 8 a.m. it was snowing but nobody worried because the four feet of snow we had heard about the previous week had diminished to four inches by the time we reached Dawson Creek.

As we went along a car passed us with its driver looking as if he wanted to get places in a hurry. The snow was getting thicker and slushier. A short time later on a straight stretch of road we saw the man who had passed us, weaving from side to side and finally sliding helplessly into the ditch.

We had to stop and when we tried to get going again our bus also slid sideways. Ahead of us were two trailer trucks also straddling the highway. In the meantime, four or five cars had piled up behind us and one of them, blessed be his name, had had the forethought to bring along a shovel. So with their assistance, our driver, Johnny Fisher, was finally able to get chains on and get the bus back on the road.

We found out afterwards the chains weren't much use for they wouldn't grip in the slushy snow and the mushy gravel of the road. The rescuers went ahead to try to get the trailers straightened out and the car back on the road.

In the meantime, most of us womenfolk just sat—though some got out to take pictures. Some of our group were menemni uvavimms and usually brought along a snack just in case they got hungry between the four or five stops we usually made. The rolls at the Johnny Canuck Motel where we had stayed the night before were particularly good so two ladies had brought four of them, together with butter and marmalade from the kitchen. After we had been stuck for an hour or so, one of the ladies started to parade up and down the aisle showing the plastic bag of rolls and announcing, "Fresh rolls $1.50 a piece, butter and marmalade extra." But nobody was hungry enough yet. She had no takers.

All this while the men had been working on the first trailer and had finally got it back on the road. After a couple of false starts it finally got going and disappeared around the curve, to our heartfelt relief. The other truck and the car drivers decided to await rescue so we squeezed past them, rounded the curve—and there was the other truck trailer at the side of the road. He too, had given up the struggle.

Somewhat, Johnny managed to squeeze past him without scratching the paint on either vehicle or going over onto the invisible, under the snow, soft shoulder. We raised a cheer as we went by and thought we were on our way. But not for long.

Around another curve (the Alaska Highway must be the curviest road in the world) we found a small car in the ditch. Its occupants were a young minister and his wife on the way to Fairbanks.

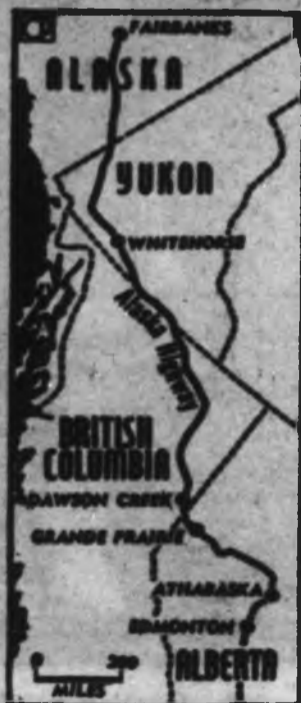

from Chicago and they had been stuck there since 8 a.m. He had burned out his clutch in breaking trail through the snow. Johnny tried to take the curve on the uphill grade and our bus slid sideways in the tracks the small car had previously made. So there we were, stuck once more on the lower slopes of Steamboat Mountain.

The man with the shovel turned up once more so Johnny started digging a track for the bus out of the two-inch-deep snow. Snow and gravel were soon flying in all directions and he had just about finished when the clatter of a snow plough announced that we were about to be rescued.

All this had involved a long wait and during it the price of the rolls had gone up to $2.50 each, butter and marmalade extra, still with no takers.

The snow plough could only plough half the road at once and then had to come back to do the other, and we thought it would have gone a couple of miles ahead of us. But we were wrong—it was only about a mile. So our little procession had to crawl along behind it.

By this time, we were well up the side of Steamboat Mountain, with the road curving around its outside edge and the valley far below. We crawled slowly up, rounded another curve—and what a sight met our eyes! We were at the end of a narrow valley with the road snaking across a narrow neck of land, then making a sharp turn to go up the mountain on the other side. On this side of the saddle a bus and two trailer trucks were stuck and on the other side a car and a camper-trailer had come within a few inches of sliding over the edge.

But word of the conditions on the mountains had finally got through and in a short while a wrecker arrived, squeezed past us—on the outside edge—and set to work to get the other vehicles out of the way. The bus was the regular daily one between Dawson Creek and Fairbanks and it had been stuck there since eight the previous evening. One of the trucks was a mail carrier, but this was one time the mail didn't go through.

By this time, it was around 3 p.m. and we were seven hours and 70 miles from Fort Nelson with around 220 to go to Watson Lake, our next stop.

By this time, also, the price of the rolls had risen from $3.50 to $5.00, still with no takers. When someone finally did make an offer they were told the rolls were not for sale—that their price was now above rubies. The last I heard of them was someone complaining, "Do you mean to tell me you didn't bring a napkin? My fingers are all stuck up with marmalade."

When the wrecker had finally straightened out the tangle ahead of us we had to wait while the cars and trucks that had been stalled on the other side of the mountain edged past us. Finally, it was our turn to creep past the stalled truck-trailers and bus and when we passed the camper we could see by skid marks that it was a miracle it hadn't fallen over the edge to the valley floor hundreds of feet below. The slope was timbered but the matchsticks called trees in this part of the world couldn't stop anything heavier than a bicycle.

After several miles, we saw a sign saying "Cafe Open". But the cafe was not open. And the owner refused to open saying he had no supplies and no help. The plumbing was what is known as "rustic" and we had to break trail through about two feet of snow to reach the facilities. By now, one of the stranded trucks had pulled in and the driver offered to boil water on the propane gas stove if we could provide coffee. The proprietor of the "cafe" had two pounds of coffee on hand and some sweet biscuits which he was willing to sell, so we finally had a bite to eat.

When we reached the next stop we found that the stranded bus passengers had got there ahead of us and had ordered all the food this "cafe" had available. We were told we could have tea or coffee, soup and pie but the cook was busy at the grill and couldn't make sandwiches. If we didn't like it we could leave it. So our courier phoned to a place some thirty miles ahead and was told they could provide for us.

Before we left some of our party looked in the kitchen and saw that a woman working there was sporting two beautiful black eyes so decided that had something to do with the cook's belligerence.

We pulled in at Watson Lake at midnight our time, but discovered that was 10 o'clock Yukon time so were able to catch up on some sleep.

If anyone had to be stuck they couldn't be stuck in a more spectacularly beautiful place with snow-covered mountains all around and a glorious sunny day. But if anyone ever asks any of our party where we were on May 24, 1964, we can cross our hearts and swear, "We were marooned on Steamboat Mountain."

The great Labrador peninsula, lying between the Atlantic and Hudson Bay, is supposed to have been the first land of the New World sighted by Norsemen of the 11th century, and until recently it was one of the least known areas of Canada. It received its name "Lavrador" (Yeoman Farmer) by the Portuguese navigator, Cartier, about the beginning of the 16th century. Jacques Cartier sailing up the Atlantic coast in 1536 called it "The Land God Gave Cain" but Cartier's name, slightly altered, has been retained.

When the Hudson's Bay Company was given its charter to Rupert's Land in 1670 it included that portion of the peninsula draining to Hudson Bay, but the British government presented the Colony of Newfoundland with the Atlantic seaboard and its drainage. Fishermen made settlements along the coast. Eskimos were scattered along Hudson Straits and the east coast of the bay. For 250 years little interest was taken in the interior which had few known resources.

After the purchase of Rupert's Land by the Canadian Government in 1870 its Labrador portion was named District of Ungava and this became part of the province of Quebec. The boundary between Ungava and Newfoundland's coastal strip was unknown and unmarked. There was some development by pulp and paper interests of Quebec in the country north of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. There was a steamer operating from Quebec to the village of Seven Islands and a company there had two airplanes for charter.

This was the situation in 1932 when a prospector brought rich samples of gold-bearing rock to show St. John's officials, which he claimed came from the headwater country of Hamilton River. This, by the decision of the Privy Council in London with representatives from Newfoundland and Canada in 1927, was "N.F.L. territory" (lands drained by rivers discharging into the Atlantic.) The richness of the samples was evident, the prospector's claim of the location of his discovery was accepted without investigation. The Newfoundland government, hard-pressed financially at the time, saw a possible source of income if mines should develop there and offered concessions starting at the Quebec boundary, extending east for 25 miles, five miles wide, for $1,000.

Exploration

One of these was taken up by a New York mining syndicate which was interested in new discoveries anywhere in the world. I was asked to make an investigation with a small party.

I gathered what information was available. Of most immediate importance was transportation. Steamer and planes provided this. Geological information was scanty. In 1893, A. P. Lowe of the Geological Survey had made an exploration of the interior of the peninsula. He had reported much evidence of iron and possibly other minerals. Topographically, a range of mountains forms the Atlantic seaboard, and mountains 50 miles north of the Gulf mark the divide which is the Quebec-Newfoundland boundary. Included in these mountains is an interior plateau, 2,000 feet elevation, falling off to the north and west, in Quebec, and easterly in Newfoundland territory. The Rivers take their rise in a series of large lakes of the upper plateau.

The interior plateau was reported to be semi-barren but with fair timber on river and lake margins. The rock formation was classed as pre-Cambrian but with little detail as to age and structure. I was not optimistic but ... "gold is where you find it." If our scanty information of the "discovery" was true, it might be of major importance ... at least it would be an interesting exploration of, to me, unknown country.

Transportation was simple and interesting. The ship from Quebec had been the yacht of a pre-war Russian grand duke. It had been sunk in the harbor of Alexandria, salvaged, and not long later wrecked in the St. Lawrence. Seven Islands was a small outpost, Hudson's Bay Co. store, an RCMP detachment and a community of fishermen and half-breed trappers and guides; for fishing licences were held chiefly by wealthy Americans from the south on the Molise and Marguerite Rivers nearby which had season runs of salmon. The two small planes were flown by adventurous bush pilots. There was a boarding house of sorts and a beautiful crescent of sand beach. Some day, we thought, this will be a summer resort, a playground. A glance in the crystal ball would have shown a bright future for the river frontage and a fortune to be made in land.

Our pilot had flown men in to work on the "discovery." He knew the approximate locality of our concession and moved us in with our canoes and supplies. For fifty miles we flew over the wooded country rising from the Gulf, then crossed a sharp range of mountains and he landed us on a large lake. I asked him, "Where is the Quebec-Newfoundland boundary?" He gave an expressive shrug, "Only le bon Dieu knows where these rivers rise."

At any rate lakes and rivers gave us easy access to what we thought was our concession. Its exact location was not important unless a discovery was made.

Iron Everywhere

After two months' examination, we were satisfied that there was no gold. It was not a gold-bearing formation. There was iron almost everywhere that the rock was exposed, thin laminated bands, twisted to create black figures almost like hieroglyphics. My companion observed, "Just like the tablets of Moses."

Low had reported the presence of iron in his exploration of the Interior in 1893. Considerable work had been done on the iron formation of Belcher Islands in Hudson Bay but it had been considered too low grade and too remote to have commercial value. This applied to the iron that we saw ... "too low grade, too remote."

As an exploration our season was interesting but our observations confirmed those of others—no farming land, scanty forests, little to attract the hunter or trapper ... or the miner.

I had a curious meeting. While stopped on an island for lunch a canoe approached, another concessionaire. We asked them to join us. One of the men had regarded me curiously and asked, "Do you remember me?"

No," I said.

"Perhaps you will recall Mills, the boy in Montebello's store in Frank in the Crow's Nest. You were mining engineer at Lillooet and told me something about mining. When I saved enough I went to college, studied mining and here I meet you after 25 years, 5,000 miles away ... curious."

"Have you seen any sign of gold," I asked.

"No," he replied in disgust, "just iron."

When we returned to Seven Islands we heard that the "honest old prospector" was a crook. His gold samples had come from Northern Ontario. The golden bubble had burst. Sadder and wiser we forgot The Labrador and left it to the bears that roam it and the occasional half-breed trapper. In that we were not so wise.

Fortune at Hand

Five years passed—which included much travel for me. Perhaps my interest was more in the story as told by the rocks than in the minerals deposited by seepages through cracks and fissures. On Hudson Bay we found the nickel of Ranken Inlet but before we staked it another party had it claimed. I was working on a copper dyke east of Great Bear Lake when Gilbert Labine discovered radium thirty miles to the south. Indians had shown me gold at Yellowknife on Great Slave Lake almost 20 years before the major discoveries. I was too busy with the survey of the lake. But why continue ... the greatest miss of all was the Labrador iron.

It was in 1937, five years after the interior

On Its Own Ashes They Rebuilt VANCOUVER

SUNDAY dawned calm, clear and beautiful. With the rise of the sun, cool zephyrs from the sea, from English Bay, wafted through the forest of what is now Vancouver's West End.

Church services were just over, the congregations gone home for the mid-day meal.

FIRE!

There was no time to think; only to lift some elderly person bodily, and perhaps take a frightened child by the hand and run, half-suffocating before the racing, raging blast. The able-bodied must look after themselves. Those who did not escape in the first five minutes perished.

It was Sunday, June 13, 1886.

Impelled by a westerly wind, which by noon had reached gale force, the flames swept clean to the soil.

"It was all over in forty-five minutes, a grand but awful sight," said a girl who lived on Deadman's Island, who, at the first alarm, jumped into her Indian canoe and watched the conflagration from the middle of Burrard Inlet.

Mrs. Alice Crakanthorp, who at 30, was still living in Vancouver, but who was then a young woman of 22, witnessed the fire from Moodyville, now North Vancouver.

"About noon we saw a terrific smoke rising from Vancouver across the harbor. Then about 3 o'clock I went down to the wharf to see the refugees land from tugs and boats. It was tragic. They had lost everything. Many of them didn't know where their children were. Their shoes were charred, for they had been walking through burning embers. We did what we could; gave them supper, and at bedtime took them to the Masonic Hall where they slept. The sawmill provided them with blankets. I asked Alice White, the youngest girl, what she thought of it all, and she replied: 'Thank goodness that old coat I hated got burned up.'"

All summer, men had been engaged clearing the new CPR townsite, and on that peaceful Sabbath morn their slash fires got out of hand. Every able-bodied man responded to the alarm. But it was too late.

The city did not burn. It exploded in flame. Buildings simply melted before the fiery blast.

An eyewitness reported: "Chunks of flaming wood as big as my leg were flying over us and dropping in the town. St. James Church was afire minutes after the conclusion of morning service. The new Presbyterian Church was burning before buildings near the fire; a flaming firebrand from the sky must have dropped upon its roof. There was a man driving horse and wagon; man and horse perished in the centre of the road. Two iron fires and some ashes was all that was left of man, horse and wagon.

The fire went down wooden sidewalks faster than a man could run. People waded out into the sea. It was our only means of escape. There was a current of cool air close to the surface of the water we stood in—waist deep. We breathed it and it saved us.

"It was all over in an hour. The city had been swept clean to the bare black earth, save for half a dozen buildings and a few floating scowhouses. Most of the survivors were led a safe distance along the beach. Many of those in the water were rescued by sailors from the barque Robert Kerr, at anchor. The tug Senator picked up others and took them to Moodyville, across the inlet. Gallant men were those sailors.

"Word of the tragedy soon spread to New Westminster and before sundown a man on horseback brought word that food was coming, and all the blankets the people of that town could send. By nightfall, two wagon loads of eatables arrived, brought from New Westminster by the Knights of Labor, a pioneer organization. By the feeble light of a candle, lantern or no light at all, food and blankets were distributed. The weaker and elderly were served first; the men got what was left.

"A shed adjoining the Bridge Hotel (one of the few buildings to escape the fire), was converted into a rude morgue, and on a long table hastily erected therein, was reverently laid each body—or part of a body—as it was brought in. The hotel gave us blankets and in them we wrapped such remains as were found, with a note attached to each parcel saying where the contents had been picked up. Altogether, there were 21 parcels, but I know of other bodies—probably a dozen—which were found during the next few days.

"The little morgue was lighted with candles, and in that feeble illumination, a procession passed in and out all night. Some were searchers bringing in their sad burden; others, distracted fathers and mothers looking for their little ones, their faces grimed with sweat and charcoal dust—their clothes such as they wore when they first ran.

"It was never known—and never will be—how many lost their lives. Of all the remains found immediately after the fire, only three were recognizable by their features. Three bodies, evidently husband, wife and daughter, were found weeks later in a well where once some shacks stood. They must have been recent arrivals, for they were never identified. There was three feet of water in the well and their clothes were unharmed by the fire. The fire had evidently swirled over the well and they had suffocated, not burned. Remains of victims continued to be found years afterwards. A skeleton found 20 years later was identified by a watch. Three men who had gallantly volunteered to help fight the fire were never seen again. What became of them we never found out; they had a month's pay coming which was never claimed, nor did we hear from relatives."

IN THREE DAYS," painted in huge letters on a cotton banner, and nailed to the side of the "CPR Hotel," a three-storey wooden building, is indicative of the resourcefulness of determined men. In three days it was giving shelter, such as it was, but free, to the homeless. Later it was known as the Northern Hotel and stood at 40-44 West Hastings Street. Vancouver was incorporated a city on April 6, 1886, only 68 days before the fire, and on May 3 the inhabitants voted at their first civic election. There was no voter's list. Returning officer Constable Miller, permitted all—men only—four hundred and ninety, who presented themselves at the dining room in his small cottage to put a ballot paper in the one and only ballot box. Malcolm Alexander MacLean, as mayor, and 10 aldermen were elected.

The inauguration of civic government was fraught with eccentricities. All were beginners, knew nothing about electoral formalities, and being novices—including the voters—broke every imaginable electoral rule and regulation. It was asserted that some voters came early and came often. However, a mayor and council had been elected. Who cared how?

The council was without a city hall, an office wherein to meet, and without civic officials, without civic funds, and no means of getting any as there was no assessment roll. It had no bank account, for the city did not possess a bank.

A week later, the council held its first meeting. They crowded together in Constable Miller's small dining room, sat on borrowed chairs and laid their hats on the table in front of them. First they appointed a city clerk (Thomas F. McGuigan), followed by a full slate of civic officials with salaries—but with

THE CASTAWAYS

In the curious way that things sometimes link together it was just recently that twice in a couple of hours this slightly old-fashioned word occupied my thoughts.

First was when George Nicholson and I met on a street corner, when I learned among other things that his recent book, "Vancouver Island's West Coast," still enjoys a good sale. George being sort of unofficial historian of the west coast, it was after the exchange of a few pleasant-ries that he mentioned how old John Ross had died at Qualicum a few months ago at the age of 96.

Mr. Ross, 50 years a missionary among the west coast Indians, retired first to Alberni, which is where I met him a few years ago. I recalled among his many stories, a castaway yarn about Ed Fitzpatrick, an American who took up land before the First World War on the desolate southwest shore of Flores Island. On the southeast side, four or five miles away, was a general store and Ross' Indian Mission School.

Fitzpatrick had arrived at Ahousat in the steamer Tees with some stock which, in the style of the day (there being no wharf), were pushed into the chuck to swim ashore. After he rounded them up on the Indian reserve, he then herded them along the beach to his location.

He built a shack and corral, and struggled to keep himself alive while fending off the depredations of wolves, cougars and coons. But it was a losing battle. Eventually they got the lot. The land was mostly muskeg, fit for nothing, and to the incessant boom of the Pacific breakers on the foreshore, Fitz lived a sort of Robinson Crusoe existence, broken only by periodic visits to the Ahousat store for staples like beans and bacon and flour.

On these occasions sometimes he walked the beaches, or else went by skiff. Returning by water one dreary November day in 1915, apparently he wasn't looking where he was going and slid up on a reef on the Garrard group in Russell Channel. Which wouldn't have been too bad, only a following sea dumped him. Though he was quick to rescue a sack of flour and a can of coal oil, his skiff drifted off.

He clambered up the reef to a tiny island covered with low scrub growth, the biggest tree—in the middle—having blown down. On this rock Fitzpatrick lived for the next 30 days, without sight or sound of any passing boat or canoe, existing on bannock made from flour and rainwater he found in rock pools, and shell-fish. He had five wet matches on him when he landed, and these he dried out in his hair. Once he got a fire going, he kept it going.

Rescue

WHEN HIS FLOUR came to an end, he existed the last four or five days on shellfish and rainwater, by which time some passing Indians noticed him. They took him across the mile-wide channel to Flores Island where, dirty and emaciated, he was later found by a couple of the older Indian boys from Ross' school, whom Ross had sent out to search the shoreline for possible shipwreck survivors after a terrific storm. Fitz said later that it was during that gale he thought he was finished because of the phenomenal seas that crashed on the island. The spray that swept it from end to end nearly washed him out of his refuge, which was the hole below the roots of the upturned tree.

Thus the castaway story that chance mention of John Ross had provoked. Within the hour it was linked with another.

It was while I was idly awaiting an appointment that I happened to pick from a library shelf a very small and apparently very old book. Opening it at random I found myself reading an account of the voyage of Capt. Woodes Rogers, an English privateer (and part-time pirate) who, around 1700, preyed on Spanish galleons with his ships, Duke and Duchess, off the Pacific coast of South America. His victims apparently were the treasure ships that piled between the Philippines and Peru and the Horn.

Crusoe

AS I CAUGHT THE KNACK of transposing "f's" for "s's" and worked my way through a couple of pages about cannon fire and swinging cutlasses, bloodshed and smashed limbs, suddenly the narrative took me to the island of Juan Fernandez and I found myself in at the rescue of the original Robinson Crusoe—Alexander Selkirk!

As I read on, it dawned upon me that I was reading the original account, so I rifled back to the frontispiece to see what on earth I was reading. The title, guaranteed to make a modern publisher reach for an aspirin, was "The World Displayed, or a curious collection of voyages and travels selected from the writers of all nations in which the conjectures and interpolations of several vain editors and translators are expunged; every relation is made concise and plain and the divisions of countries and kingdoms are clearly and distinctly noted."

The section I had been reading was "A Cruising Voyage Round the World" by Woodes Rogers, first published in 1718. This was where Defoe got his stuff for Robinson Crusoe! For Daniel didn't get it first hand, not even second hand. In fact he never met Selkirk, the hero of Juan Fernandez. But in fictionizing the incident, after Steele and another writer had had a crack at it, he achieved of course an all-time best seller.

The famous castaway who called himself Selkirk, though his name was really Selcraig, was a sort of Tom Jones type, seventh son of a shoemaker and tanner in the Fifeshire fishing village of Largo, on Scotland's Firth of Forth. Which means that the real Robinson Crusoe, like the Bible printing King James the First, lapsed into the Doric to probably announce he'd have "rwa" muckle herrin' for his breakfast the morn's morn." It never struck you that Robinson Crusoe talked like Harry Lauder, did it?

Bad Boy

IN THE RIGID STANDARD of the day young Selkirk was in fair way to becoming a juvenile delinquent, especially when he got kicked out of the church congregation for making vulgar noises during a service. So, as usual, he went to sea, and at 25 was with Damner's expedition to the south seas which, despite what history books tell us, was nothing more or less than a buccaneering expedition. However, as long as Spaniards were being robbed it had the benevolent patronage of church and state.

By 1704, when Selkirk was serving in the Cinque Ports (Capt. Tom Stradling) the lonely island of Juan Fernandez 400 miles off the Chilean coast had been the occasional rendezvous for pirates (mostly English) who stopped there for wood and water and goat meat. The goats had been left there by the Spanish discoverer Juan Fernandez 140 years before. By Queen Anne's day they numbered thousands. The island, about 12 miles by 6, had a nice climate where seemingly everything flourished from pepper trees to peaches.

Seems that two of Stradling's sailors had been accidentally overlooked a couple of months before, so now he was returning to the island to pick them up. However, when they anchored in a cove some argument arose between him and Selkirk, and the upshot was Selkirk voluntarily exiled himself on the island with, as the original account has it, "a fire-lock, some powder, bullets, tobacco, a hatchet, a knife, a kettle, a Bible and some books." When Stradling put him ashore he would have called the whole thing off, but Alex wouldn't back down. These Fifers are an obstinate breed.

IRON IS KING IN LABRADOR

had been abandoned to its bears and the occasional wandering native that Mathieu Andre became interested in rocks . . . especially a heavy, black, shining rock he had found not far north of our concession of '32. When those who knew saw it—88% iron—they were interested; and when he said, "Lots, lots" they were excited.

This was richer than the famous Masabi Range which was facing exhaustion. A new source of world importance was essential. This was it . . . the richest and largest iron deposit in the world.

Remoteness . . . that was nothing, a few millions built a railway 300 miles from Seven Islands, across the mountains to the iron. Great docks were built at what might have become a bathing beach for tourists. The little steamer of the ex-grand duke was replaced by a fleet of ore carriers.

There was no gold. Millions have been spent in the development of Labrador iron. Billions will be returned for the heavy, shining rock Andre discovered. Gold has its uses due to its properties and relative scarcity . . . but it is non-essential. Iron is what keeps the wheels of industry turning, maintains transportation and our daily life.

Labrador had little to offer to Cortereal's "Yeomen Farmers" but it has brought untold wealth to those who crossed the ranges of what Cartier had described as "the land God gave Cain."

This was not an inconsiderable gift . . . IRON!

AS THE SHIP DISAPPEARED over the horizon Selkirk turned to and built a couple of shacks, one to store his food, the other to sleep in. I would imagine that his ensuing four years and four months of exile would make an interesting study for a psychiatrist; the problem being, would he crack up, get bushed?

Serena, however, being a rough and rugged individual who had survived a few sea fights, he was adaptable. First thing he learned was how to light a fire by rubbing sticks.

There being, according to his account, no dangerous wild animals or anything venomous on the island, the animal life prospered, proved by the vast herds of goats and the rats and cats. Figuring the cats would be useful keeping the rats down, whenever he killed a goat (he knocked off 500 according to his record) he shared the meat with the cats. In time he tamed about a hundred of them, scores of them following him everywhere he went and sleeping with him at night. He also tamed some new-born kids, and having nothing else to do taught them to prance around on their hind legs. Dancing, he called it, and he used to dance with them, singing at the top of his voice.

"Thus," reported Woodes Rogers, "by the favor of providence and the vigor of youth, being now only 31 years old, he at last conquered all the inconveniences of his solitude and grew very easy."

As for his diet, Selkirk said he missed only bread and salt. Pimiento and pepper trees flourished, and the turnips and potatoes that Dampler had planted years before had spread to acres. In time of course his clothing gave out, so he made more out of goatskins—remember, his father was a tanner—and he mended and re-mended his shirts by unraveling his woolen stockings, using a needle made out of a nail.

Slaves

ONLY ONCE DID HE SEE human beings, and that was when a Spanish ship dropped anchor in the cove. Selkirk knew what being a prisoner of the Spanish entailed. In fact by now skipper Tom Stradling had already found out. The Cinque Ports had foundered and he and his bold buccanniers were working in the Spanish mines at Lima as slave labor!

As soon as Selkirk spotted the ship's flag he took off, and when the sailors got ashore and in turn spotted the fact that there was someone living on the island they spread out in a manhunt.

Deep in the bush Selkirk was up a tall tree when two or three of the search party came right to its base where, according to Selkirk "they relieved themselves and went away."

It was in February 1709 that Capt. Woodes Rogers put in to Juan Fernandez with his privateers the Duke and Duchess mainly to stem the scurvy among his crews. Someone spotted in the darkness the twinkle of Selkirk's fire, and the next morning Capt. Dover (a Bristol physician turned privateer) went ashore and greeted the castaway.

It's interesting to note what was thought of the skin-clad exile when he came aboard the Duke. Apparently he spoke haltingly, and had a complete distaste for alcohol and the ship's provisions. It was when the scurvy-stricken crewmen were taken ashore (two of them died) that Selkirk offered to get them some fresh meat. It was then they noticed how his bare feet had toughened so that he outstripped everyone (even the ship's dog!) on the roughest ground. He had been so long out of powder and shot that he could overtake the goats on foot, strangling them with his bare hands. When some of the puffing crewmen caught up with him, he had already killed a goat, slung it 'round his neck, and was running back to the beach with it!

Treasure

IT WAS QUITE A TIME before he was able to wear shoes on board ship, because his feet got so swollen.

You'd imagine that after this four-year adventure Selkirk was ready to return to his native Largo, to live out his days telling tales of his south sea island to the wide-eyed fisher-folk. Not so. Immediately recognized as a good sailor and navigator, he was promptly made sailing master of the Duchesse which, with the Duke, headed for the Spanish sea-port town of Guayaquil in Ecuador. There they crashed in with yells and cheers and waving tutulamas, and the result was an enormous haul of treasure, plate, gems and gold coin. Under the watchful eye of the pistol-adorned Woodes Rogers, every man who came aboard had to dump his loot in the common pot, from which shares were afterwards allotted.

Selkirk's share was 800 pounds ($4,000): almost a fortune in those days. However, when finally he got back home to humdrum Largo somehow you sense he wasn't exactly received as the returning hero. It was then that something sort of snapped (perhaps now we need the psychiatrist for he took to living in a sort of cave in the grounds of Craigiehall, his father's house).

Sophia

HOWEVER a young bachelor with eight hundred quid couldn't be entirely ignored, and comes now the love interest. Despite his standoffish attitude, in some fashion he met Sophia Bruce, the village belle. For all we know it might have been a Tarzan and Jane affair. Anyway the couple eloped, heading first for Bristol and later on, London. Curious to relate, despite his strict Presbyterian background, Alec never got 'round to marrying Sophia. As we would say, in our simple western idiom, he just "shacked up with her."

As he was due in time to inherit his father's property, one day he made out a will leaving all his estate to "my loving friend Sophia Bruce of the Pall Mall, London, spinster."

That last word was sufficient to toss Sophia for a loss in a subsequent court battle; for in time Alec ditched Sophia for a widow, Frances Candes. It was of course much too early a day for him to heed Sam Weller's injunction, "Beware of the widows!"

There was none of this free love stuff for the experienced Frances; she demanded a preacher and a ring, and after that binding formality it wasn't long before Alec made out another will, in her favor. Then he went off to sea, to die aboard HMS Weymouth, as a Lieutenant in 1723.

By the time his will was being probated Frances had married for the third time, and was now Mrs. Frances Hall. Came the court action I spoke of when Sophia and Frances each brandished a will. But as any law student could tell you, the lady with the marriage lines won the day.

There was just one sole remaining Selcraig living in Edinburgh in 1808, when HMS Topaz (Topaz Avenue) went back to England from Esquimaux.

On her way south she stopped off at Juan Fernandez where on a rock a metal plate was attached on which was inscribed:

"In Memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner; a native of Largo, in the county of Fife, Scotland, who lived on this island in complete solitude for four years and four months. He was landed from the Cinque Ports, galleon, AD 1704 and was taken off in the Duke, privateer, on the 12th February, 1709. He died Lieutenant of HMS Weymouth AD 1723, aged 47 years. This tablet is erected near "Selkirk's Lookout" by Commodore Powell and officers of HMS Topaz, AD 1808."

SALADS ARE NOT NEW . . . as early as the 17th century an Englishman by the name of John Evelyn wrote "A Discourse on Sallets." Here are his instructions:

"Let the herby ingredients be exquisitely cull'd and cleans'd of all worm-eaten dry-spotted leaves. Then discreetly sprinkle with spring water, let remain in cullender, then swing gently in a clean napkin. To dress . . . make sure the oyl, an ingredient so indispensibly and highly necessary, be very clean, not highly colored or yellow; but rather a pallid green without smell or least touch of rancid. The vinegar must be perfectly clear, neither soure, vapid or spent. And the pepper be not bruised or too small a dust. Other condiments besides pepper and salt might include juniper berries, saffron or Jamaica pepper (allspice); or a mashed egg yolk might be blended with the condiments before the oyl is beaten in."

Sounds almost contemporary doesn't it? Even in biblical and ancient times there is mention of watercress, lettuce and cucumbers. Lettuce, camomile, dandelion and mint were the bitter herbs of the Hebrew Paschal feast. The ancient Greeks often closed a repast with lettuce. Romans served lettuce and eggs as an appetizer.

Frozen and jellied salads are a modern development. These are lovely and versatile . . . they may be made with sweet flavored gelatine and fruits for dessert or with the unflavored gelatine and savory additions.

As the weather gets warmer and things to do outside cut even further into our kitchen time, it's wise to consider these "make-ahead" jellied salads. These can be made in an odd 15 minutes in the morning for elegant service at 6:30 at night. Jellied salads can be prepared at the convenience of the preparer, not the eater.

Our first recipe is for a Salmon Mousse. One doesn't necessarily need a fish mold to make it, although these are usually quite inexpensive and do make a showing. But any mold will do. All that is necessary is a light heart and a gay spirit and a desire to make something new and delicious. The trick with this recipe is in the seasoning. Our old friend Angostura Bitters is one of the chief flavoring and seasoning agents.

SALMON MOUSSE . . . One can (1 lb.) salmon, either pink or red may be used; 1½ cups diced celery hearts, 1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing, 1 tbsp. Angostura Bitters, ¼ cup sweet pickle relish, 2 tbsp. finely chopped onion, 2 tbsp. lemon juice, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tbsp. (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine, ¼ cup cold water, ½ cup boiling water, and garnishes of sliced tomatoes, sliced hard cooked eggs and lettuce leaves.

Drain salmon. Remove skin and bones from fish and flake finely with a fork. Add celery, mayonnaise, Angostura, pickle, onion, lemon juice and salt. Mix with a fork to blend.

In a small bowl combine gelatine and cold water. Let stand for 5 minutes or until gelatine softens. Add boiling water and stir until gelatine dissolves. Combine with salmon mixture. Lightly rub a 5-cup mold with salad oil. Fill with salmon mixture. Chill until firm. Unmold on serving platter. Garnish with sliced tomatoes, sliced hard cooked eggs and arrange a trail of lettuce or watercress around edge. Serve with additional mayonnaise.

This is a lovely do-ahead recipe to serve chilled on a warmish day.

With this savory main dish you could have a starter of spicy, chilled tomato juice. Have speedy, brown 'n' serve rolls hot from the oven. And how about ice cream and thin sugar cookies for dessert?

Summer brings its medley of fresh fruits. What is nicer for dessert than a Fruit Salad? It is refreshing and not too rich after a heavy meal. This particular recipe comes from the notebook of a chef who before his retirement held forth in an ocean liner. It was his own particular specialty. There are two ingredients that lift it out of the ordinary . . . Angostura Bitters and poppy seeds.

FROMENADE DECK SALADE DE FRUITS

. . . Strawberries or raspberries, cherries pitted, peach slices, fresh or canned, watermelon chunks, pineapple tidbits or wedges, fresh or canned, and Mandarin orange sections, canned. Prepare the fruit (you can use any combination) and chill. Combine in a small saucepan and add ¼ to ½ cup sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Cover and cook 2 minutes. Add 2 tsp. Angostura Bitters and 2 tsp. poppy seeds. Arrange fruit in glass bowl and pour syrup over. Serve warm or chilled.

And now back to savory salads. Particularly on seasoning them with that fragrant but potent bud . . . garlic. "A slip of the garlic can cause more trouble than the slip of the tongue." This bit of wisdom should be inscribed in large letters over every kitchen door. Yet the proper touch of garlic lifts salad out of the commonplace into heady realms of great gastronomy.

There is a story of a famed French chef, noted for his light hand with garlic, who achieved his results by biting into a clove of garlic then gently breathing upon his creation. Perhaps this method is too aesthetic

WAYS TO USE GARLIC VINEGAR . . .

A few drops in any gravy add a lively flavor.

A few drops improve a sandwich filling or a bowl of soup.

Baked beans bubble with a mysterious fragrance when 2 or 3 teaspoons are added to the pot.

Put a little in a meat or salmon loaf, on a smoking steak or on pork chops just before taking them from the pan.

Add it to dips and sauces and a spoonful or two added to the dough for herb bread is nice.

Garlic in this restrained form is delightful.

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 12 years old and for years have suffered because my mother always rolled my hair in metal or plastic curlers which hurt my head. I hated to sleep on them because they gave me a headache.

I bought some nylon net for less than 40 cents a yard and cut it into three-inch-wide strips. I made each strip 48 inches long, and rolled them into wonderful curlers.

I started rolling at one end of the strip and rolled it up as if I were rolling a bandage. I can make any size curler I want by adding or subtracting more net. I sewed the loose ends with a needle and thread. I fasten the curlers in my hair with two bobby pins.

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT FOR FOOD

Of course people's taste for garlic differs. Perhaps the best rule for adding garlic is to go easy at first . . . more can always be added if it is not quite to your taste. Another thing is to add it in a medium that will insure its even distribution. (Crunching into a clove of garlic could cover a lifetime friendship). An even distribution can be achieved by rubbing the salad bowl with a cut clove. Rub as vigorously or lightly as desired. Then too the garlic may be minced very, very fine. Or use a garlic press. Some complain that the press is too hard to clean to warrant its use . . . it really isn't if you press an unpeeled bud. If you want a really delicate flavor impale a clove of garlic on a toothpick and let it stand in the oil or salad dressing for awhile, then discard. Garlic powder is less salty than garlic salt.

My favorite method is to distill its essence in vinegar. Of course you can buy garlic vinegar but it is easy to make and much cheaper. Simply score four or five garlic buds and drop them in a pint jar of vinegar (cider, malt or white). Screw the lid tight and leave at least a week. The garlic pieces can be removed when the vinegar is of the strength to suit you. It should be strong enough for the garlic to hit your nose forcefully when the lid is removed. It should be quite potent because the liquid is used in small quantities.

PERKY TEA

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 14 years old. I often like a cup of tea and I make it in mother's percolator.

Perked tea is delicious! This is how I fix it:

I line the coffee-pot basket with tea bags, fill the pot with water and perk just as I would coffee. The number of tea bags I use depends on the number of cups of tea I want.

It's real "perky" tea and tastes fabulous.

Tom Parker

DEAR HELOISE:

I am nine years old. I thought your readers might enjoy this little tip.

We covered our old notebooks with adhesive-backed plastic paper. They came out just beautiful, and can be washed with soap and water.

Since this type plastic comes in many colors and designs, we can be very creative, especially when it comes to our school colors.

Billy Gresham

DEAR AUNT HELOISE:

I call you aunt because mother says you are her sister. Though I know you aren't really her sister, we have adopted you into our home.

I am ten years old and my daddy bought me my first transistor radio. Instead of using the aerial (which should be handled carefully because they break easily) when a program you are listening to just won't come in . . . just turn the radio around until you get the program louder.

Sometimes, you can lay the radio on its back or upside down and the program comes in louder.

I love you,

Sandra

I will bet that lots of teenagers didn't know your hint!
Thanks for writing and do tell your friends if they have any good hints to write us a/e this paper. Just address your letters to Heloise. I'll get 'em!
And did you know that I have a twelve-year-old daughter?

SPOTLIGHT on HANDCRAFTS

There has just come into my hands a very interesting and informative little booklet. It is "The 1963 Directory of Handicraft Products and Producers in British Columbia," which I consider a most impressive title, and it is published and circulated by the B.C. department of industrial development, trade and commerce, which is pretty impressive too.

The publication consists of some two dozen pages in which are listed the names and addresses of scores of talented individuals who make, it seems, just about everything of which human hands are capable, and who live in all sorts of unlikely and unexpected places between the Pacific Ocean and our other B.C. borders.

A foreword of the booklet advises, in part,

"The production in British Columbia of handcrafted articles is increasing steadily, and in the years to come will make a substantial contribution to our economy. In particular it should have a valuable effect on our tourist industry in that it will afford our many visitors the opportunity to purchase distinctive British Columbia handicrafts."

A conversation with the department's Ray Kersey, in charge of the booklet, resulted in further informative details. It is produced, he said, mainly for the benefit of gift shops and such other outlets as may be interested in buying and selling the handicraft articles, and who receive inquiries about them. Because there are constant inquiries, the little directory goes far afield. It is sent to department stores all across the country, to various centres in the United States from Texas to California, to B.C. House in San Francisco and in London. In fact the department is always on the lookout for likely spots where the reception of such information as the booklet contains may result in further encouragement for these home and studio industries.

"However," said Ray, "the directory itself is by no means complete. We know that. We're sure that there are hundreds more artisans at work throughout the province, producing saleable goods, and we are anxious to see them listed."

This effort on the part of the government to create an increased demand for handicrafts, to help solve whatever selling difficulties the artists may have, and to provide them in this way with widespread advertising, is entirely free. All the craftsman has to do is write to the department, and his name, address, and type of work will be included in the next issue.

Displays Arranged

Another phase of the department's activities is the provision, wherever possible, of displays. Examples of this sort of thing are the handsome showrooms set up, with the co-operation of the management of the Empress Hotel, in its lobby and corridors, in which ceramics, weaving, jewelry, carving, together with information as to the shops in which they may be purchased, are set out for the benefit of visitors.

In Vancouver, said Ray, the Government Information Centre on Hornby Street just above the Vancouver Hotel, has a particularly spacious window devoted wholly to the showing of handicraft from all over the province. The Kootenay School of Fine Arts, for instance, had seven different displays there last year.

It helps a lot when a government is sufficiently foresighted to lend a hand in this fashion to home industries. In England, subsidies are available to the small manufacturer who can bring a payroll of sorts to the little town or village. Here in B.C. the department's moral support and advertising is producing noticeable results. The home industries are developing, and the number of inquiries received by the department is steadily increasing.

To this writer, the nice little directory is fascinating for quite another reason. I am intrigued by the thought of the different people living in out-of-the-way places who, perhaps because they are shut in a good deal during the winter, or their television reception is poor, or they live alone, have developed clever and worthwhile hobbies. There are such a lot of them! Copper and leather work, ceramics and lapidary items, weaving, painting, and wood-working, are all popular arts and many names are listed under these headings. And many people do and make many different things.

But, as far, there seems to be listed only one person, for instance, who makes papier-mache animals, and he (or she) lives in Chilliwack. Somebody at Okanagan Landing, that rather quaint, rather charming little collection of homes tucked away among the trees, beside the lake, beyond the hills of the interior, makes candles. Now I would love to make candles . . . I think they're beautiful, artistic, romantic. Doesn't anybody else in B.C. do this?

Lace-Makers

Following along through the alphabetical list, one finds that a lady in a place called Squirrel Cove, on Cortes Island, does crochet work. One can see her in a rocking chair, looking out past mossy rocks to where the seagulls wheel above the kelp, as her busy hands build a pile of patterned thread in her lap. So, too, does one envision a lady who makes hairpin lace at Carmanah Point, at Clifton.

There are three people in the book who make dolls and doll clothes at Vancouver, Oliver, and Kamloops, respectively. And though I always thought lots of retired millers did authentic ship-models, only one is listed here, a gentleman in Nanaimo. Perhaps the rest simply don't want to sell their work.

Osoyoos, Fort Langley, and Victoria have people who do textile painting, and the only artisan recorded who does hand-hooked pictures, lives in Hope, where there is also a gentleman who makes spinning wheels from different native woods. Silk-screening has devotees in Summerland, Vancouver, Port Alberni, and Whistler, which last spot I had to look up on the map. Cortes Island, again. People in Surrey and Aldergrove make totem masks, while Quamuel, Hefley Creek and Revelstoke are among the towns and cities which come up with weavers. There are quite a lot of weavers here and there.

Intriguing Jewelry

By far the most popular sport, however, would seem to be the creation of jewelry, with ceramics coming a close second. And in the jewelry field a wide variety of materials is popular. There are workers who use the B.C. gems and stones, ceramics, copper, silver, enamel, petit-point, leather, shells, driftwood and burls, and plastic. But in this particular classification there is one solitary artist who, because her specialty is the only one of its kind across the entire width of Canada, merits individual mention. This is Mrs. Vinicio Crogna, of 3050 Carroll Street, who creates her jewelry of Venetian glass.

She and her husband have been here, from Italy, only a few years. She herself spent two years learning her craft before she left her native land, and it's fascinating to watch her work. The beads she makes aren't blown. She sits at a table with a small window pane between herself and the blowtorch type of fire which melts long glass rods to red-hot balls. These she picks up on a thin, specially made copper wire rather like a knitting needle, con-

"If you can't beat them, join them," could have been the thought of Mrs. Ada Tory as she first accepted her husband's invitation to try her hand at pistol shooting.

Both George Tory, who holds a sharpshooter classification from the Canadian Civilian Association of Marksmen, and his 17-year-old son Gary are avid pistol shots who spend much of their free time on the firing point.

"I was not overly enthused with the idea of shooting, but as George and Gary got so much enjoyment out of it I decided I might as well join them," Mrs. Tory said. "Of course I had an alternative. I could have stayed at home by myself, which appealed to me even less than the racket made by firing.

"My first visits to the range were rather as the family martyr. I couldn't have cared less about hitting the target," she said. "I just put in the time waiting for my men-folk to shoot their targets full of holes. But when I began occasionally to make a score, and found I could actually control the weapon, my interest began to develop. I was no longer afraid of the gun, and it didn't seem quite so heavy to hold. Even the noise was less bothersome."

Ada's initiation into the hand-gun fraternity took place three years ago in Halifax, N.S., where her husband was stationed at that time.

She found the club members ever willing to take time out to explain where she was going wrong, and freely give her pointers which increased her skill with the pistol. One of the volunteer instructors was Gary McMahon, one of Canada's leading pistol shots. Mr. McMahon was the first Canadian to win the Canadian Open Pistol Championship Match. He has represented Canada in the pistol events at the Olympics and at the Pan-American games.

Mrs. Tory, her interest in shooting steadily increasing, began reading the magazines on guns and ammunition which belonged to her husband and son. Soon topical discussions on shooting became three-way conversations in the family. Previously she had ignored them.

The Torys have found a family recreation. In this type of sport every member of the family is a stiff competitor. At the end of a shooting session no one participant can criticize another's marksmanship because only the individual shooter knows the errors that were made and how the corrections can be made.

This Victoria family has provided formidable competition at pistol meets. This was shown in the results of the RCN Pacific Command's Rifle Association pistol meet held at Laxton last November. George Tory was the high sharpshooter in all four matches. Gary won the closed team match as well as the closed aggregate. Mrs. Tory won the women's pistol match for the second straight year.

Although pistol shooting has only in recent years been considered a sport for family participation there have been many feminine experts in the field. Among the best in the Pacific Northwest is Mrs. Gertrude Backstrom of Seattle, Wash., according to Lieutenant George Grivel, RCN, who was a member of Canada's Bikey team of 1961.

"The first time I saw Mrs. Backstrom firing she was using a .38 cal. single action revolver on the 50-yard range. At first glance I thought she was missing her target completely," Lt. Grivel said. "However, on taking a closer look I saw she had placed all ten shots directly in the centre of the bull's eye in a group about the size of a twenty-five cent piece."

Women take to pistol shooting more readily than they do rifle shooting, according to Lt. Grivel. The hand gun, aside from being much lighter in weight, is fired from the standing position. The rifle is mainly fired from the prone position, which can become a dusty if not muddy chore on many occasions.

Pistol shooting on Vancouver Island can provide excellent family enjoyment during good weather when the outdoor ranges can be used. The picture changes radically during inclement weather. Aside from the lack of indoor ranges in this area, the ones that are used are woefully inadequate as far as any social amenities are concerned and thereby discourage participation by entire families.

"The basic design for our ranges was drawn up many years ago and to this day they are being constructed like windowless dungeons," Lt. Grivel said. "With the invention of bullet-proof plastic many changes could now be made. The indoor ranges should be brought up into the light. Build some windows into the places and install proper ventilation systems, add a decent lounge area, including a snack bar, and this would make it more popular with all the family."

Not many years ago bowling alleys and poolrooms were often located in dark and dingy surroundings. This has been changed. The games remained the same, but the settings have been completely revolutionized for family recreation.

"Until something similar is done to improve the indoor target ranges and bring them into a far better state than they are at present I'm afraid indoor shooting as a family sport will not be fully enjoyed by too many people," Lt. Grivel said. "But, if the buildings and the ranges were modernized and brought up to the standard of the modern bowling alley then target shooting would place very high on the popularity list of family entertainment."

Victorian Publishes New Novel

By KEN JOHNSON

Elsie Fry Laurence has captured the feeling of small town life in this down-to-earth novel of a United Church minister and his family.

Her characters, and particularly her dialogue, are excellently handled. They reflect a pattern of genuine human feelings and failings as the plot unfolds.

Andrew Burns, the minister, has his passively stolid routine shaken to its roots when his daughter, a nurse in Vancouver, casually writes that she is in love with a Jewish agnostic surgeon at the hospital where she works.

Burns finds he can put his religious convictions aside in advising ing on the matter, but cannot accept the further complication that the surgeon is married, with two children.

Switching frequently from the day-to-day emotional rigors experienced by Burns and his wife in their home town of Bradley, B.C., to the idyllic affair in the big city, Mrs. Laurence creates atmosphere and occasionally indulges in light philosophic interludes.

The incompatibility of the ideas and principles of parents and their maturing offspring is mirrored quite classically.

And Mrs. Laurence has a talent, unknowingly or otherwise, for creating real people and making them say real things.

HEIGHT WINGS, by Elsie Fry Laurence, Longmans Canada Limited; $4.50.

She has an eye for seemingly irrelevant detail which lends to the compelling realism of her writing.

Herself a Victorian, Mrs. Laurence was born in England, where she published her first novel under a pen-name at the age of 18.

Since then, bringing up her family has prevented her doing any full-scale creative writing. But she has written numerous poems, short-stories and radio scripts.

Her new novel is not going to shatter the literary world by any means. It's a well-written, simple story about real people. "But" it could be the start of a promising career in fiction for Mrs. Laurence.

Bancroft Wrote Fulsomely of Victoria's

In 1878 there arrived in Victoria an historian of note, Hubert Howe Bancroft of San Francisco. He was writing a history of British Columbia and he came here to interview the old-timers who were still about.

For years he had wanted to meet Sir James Douglas. But he procrastinated, and by the time Bancroft arrived, Douglas had been gone nearly a year, and so Bancroft had to content himself by learning of the father of Victoria from those who had known him.

Bancroft's notes on some of our prominent citizens did not please them and their families. He was a forthright man and jotted down his observations in all integrity.

Some of the pioneers lent valuable documents to Bancroft and he took them away with him to San Francisco, and did not return them, so some people said, and some people also said that papers and documents which rightly belong in British Columbia are now in archives in California; in other words, such people hinted—Bancroft did a little stealing.

The newspapers duly took note of Mr. Bancroft's arrival here. The Colonist said: "H. H. Bancroft, Esq., head of the great publishing house of H. H. Bancroft and Company, San Francisco, arrived by the mail steamer. Mr. Bancroft, who is engaged in collecting material for a history of the Pacific Coast, in which the annals of British Columbia will constitute a prominent feature, has already written several works of an historical character."

Bancroft certainly got around during the two weeks he was in Victoria. He met all the prominent people of the time. He seems to have been a keen interviewer and prominent citizens told him all, including some gossip, which Bancroft did not fail to use. The result is his history is spiced with anecdotes and is one of the best histories ever written of this province. Bancroft was not stuffy, and his history is vivid because it is spiced with stories and descriptions of human beings, and human beings are always more exciting than events. After all, events are fashioned by human beings.

When Bancroft sailed away from Victoria in the City of Panama, The Standard observed: "Mr. Bancroft ... collected material for his history of British Columbia, which will form part of what we may call a gigantic work, as it will comprise a scientific account as well as a full history of that vast district stretching from Panama to Alaska, and embracing Central America, Mexico, California and British Columbia."

"It is needless to say that the importance of Mr. Bancroft's labors has been fully appreciated by such of our citizens who have lived in the province since the advent of the first white settlers and many wauers in possession of the government relating to past and present history of the province have been freely placed at Mr. Bancroft's disposal."

Some weeks later The Sacramento Union-Record gave an account of the Bancroft journey to Victoria: "In the line of his duty Mr. Bancroft and his wife went to the north coast recently and a slight sketch of the result of the tour we have obtained by interview."

"The object of the visit to Victoria was to interview the older officials of the Hudson's Bay Company, which had its principal depot on the Pacific at Victoria.

"At Victoria he met Dr. W. F. Tolmie; from Dr. I. W. Powell he obtained Fraser's journal, dating back to 1810, with an account of Fraser's voyage on the river discovered by him and which now bears his name.

"From Mr. Roderick Finlayson he obtained much information concerning the building of the fort, where Victoria now stands, and which was called Fort Victoria.

"A. C. Anderson of Victoria gave him a general and valuable dictation of the history of Vancouver Island and British Columbia, dating back to their earliest history. He met in Victoria also an old man named John Tod, now more than 80 years of age, who was trained from boyhood in the service of the HBC. His knowledge of the country dates back 65 years.

"Hon. Mr. Justice Crease of Victoria has been engaged by Mr. Bancroft to write up the provincial history of the country, and, being a gentleman of ability, is well fitted for the task. At Victoria Mr. Bancroft also obtained copies of the private papers and documents of the late Sir James Douglas.

"At Victoria he met Dr. Helmcken to call on the newly widowed Lady Douglas. He gives no indication he met her, though he dealt with her marriage to Douglas:

"... the course of true love ran rapidly and smoothly. There were no factitious influences at work in form of oppugnant father, subtly scheming mother, rival lover or heavy villain, so essential to the orthodox love-story. James Douglas was glad to win the love of Nella Connolly, and she was equally glad to give it to him ..."

Following are the Bancroft comments on some of our leading citizens of the time:

Alexander Caulfield Anderson: "In personal appearance at the time I saw him, he being then 63 years of age. Mr. Anderson was of slight build, wiry make, active in mind and body, with a keen, penetrating eye, covered by lids which persisted in a perpetual and spasmodic winking, brought on by snow-field exposure, and now become habitual, and doubtless as disagreeable to him as to his friends. In speech he was elegant and precise, and by no means so verbose as his writings, and in carriage, if not so dignified as Mr. Finlayson, his manner would do him credit at St. James."

Dr. John Sebastian Helmcken: "In body no less than in mind, the doctor was one to command attention. Short and slightly built, with a huge head, always having on it a huge hat; with deep, clear, intelligent eyes, in which there was mouth, holding in it the ever-present cigar, and given to much laughter, with a kind heart that gave the lie to many of his words and actions; there has never been a man in British Columbia who, with an exterior so impenetrable by a stranger, has for so many years maintained the respect and confidence of the community, who has made more friends, or performed more acts of unparaded charity than Helmcken. In more paths than one—in the pursuit of politics and medicine, in the pursuit of wealth, honor and distinction—he won the success he so richly deserved."

Sir Matthew B. Begbie: "Physically as fearless as Tod, McTavish and Yale, in that highest attribute of humanity, moral courage, he far surpassed Douglas. He was an eccentric man, but his eccentricities seemed always to take a sensible direction. It is impossible that such a man should live without making enemies. Every bad man was his enemy, every sycophant, every politician whose ambition was greater than his honesty; every coward who dare not maintain the right in the face of public opinion; every schemer for personal profit or advancement at the expense of public good—these, and the like, were his natural opponents."

James Murray Yale: Though small of stature, he was strongly built, wiry and active, and as courageous and enduring as a young Hercules—with reckless bravery. From boyhood, hardship seemed to mark him for its own; his young bones were kneaded in the trough of exposure, and the sword of Damocles seemed too often to hang from the trees of the forest he treaded."

Roderick Finlayson: "... presented as fine an appearance physically as one not very often meets. Tall, well-proportioned, erect, and crowned with grey, with fine, full features, expressive at once of benevolence and intelligence, his would have been felt as an imposing presence in any community."

James Douglas: "... striking, grand—anywhere in the world, in an American forest or a London thoroughfare, in a fur-trading fort or a legislative hall—he would have attracted notice as something above the ordinary man."

"Six feet and more in height, but so admirably proportioned that one would not imagine him so tall until one stood beside him; erect in his carriage, measured in his movements, but natural and graceful withal. Douglas had not his like in all the northwest. Toward the end of his life his long face seemed to grow longer, his large features and high forehead to assume yet more massive proportions, and the always firm and earnest purpose which his eyes

Victorians Take Philately Awards

Members of the Greater Victoria and Junior Stamp Clubs who took part in the exhibition held at Spokane last month during the Northwest Federation of Stamp Clubs' Convention submitted eight entries, four of which were placed.

The coveted Lester Memorial Cup and the American Topical Association's Certificate of Top Award were both won by Lester E. Small, 1034 Linden Ave., for his thematic collection, "Bible Studies." Mrs. Small's topical, "Bird Neighbors," was awarded the R. M. Angus Trophy.

In the 15-to-18-year class, Peter Genge, 536 Linden Ave., received the Benjamin Weeks Gold Medal for his fine historical and industrial "Outline of Canada." This is the fourth time that the Benjamin Weeks Trophy has come to Victoria.

Gerald Vaulkhard, 1532 Cedar Hill X Road, won a bronze medal for the second year in succession, with his outstanding "Sports" collection.

The Western Stamp Collectors' Championship Cup went to Henry Whittaker of the Vancouver Island Philatelic Society, for his Sudan exhibit.

Several countries are issuing stamps to commemorate 1964, known to scientists as "The Year of the Quiet Sun." A minimum of sun spot activity during the year will allow certain astrophysical observations to be made, which are ordinarily impossible, and many stations around the world will take this opportunity to gain further knowledge of the universe. One station, located in the Kerguelen Archipelago, is depicted on a 2-franc stamp recently released by Terres Australes et Antarctiques. The Inter-Governmental Corp., New York City, announces that a set commemorating the International Quiet Sun Year (1964-1965), will be issued by Ghana in June. The stamps, in the values of 2d, 6d, and 1/3d, will show the IGSY emblem and a different space satellite in each corner. There will be an imperf. souvenir sheet with a block of the 1/3d value. The set is printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd. Nigeria will also mark the year with a stamp to be issued in October.

After years of neglect, the domestic cat has been recognized as a charming subject for stamp designs and is rapidly becoming a philatelic pet. They are depicted on at least two European issues this year: Holland, and the ten-value set released by Poland in May. These unusual stamps will be a welcome addition to many topical collections.

Values and editions of Poland's issue are as follows: 40 gr. (8,000,000), 60 gr. (8,000,000), ZI, 1.55 (5,000,000), ZI, 2.50 (4,500,000), ZI, 6.50 (1,000,000), the European cat; 50 gr. (6,000,000), Siamese cat; 90 gr. (5,000,000), ZI, 1.35 (4,500,000), and ZI, 3.40 (1,500,000), Persian cat. The stamps, designed by Janusz Grabianski, were produced by offset by the State Printing Works of Securities in sheets of 50, on chalky paper.

Word comes from Australia that two commemoratives, 5d and 2/3d will be released in July to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the first airmail from Melbourne to Sydney, N.S.W., in 1914.

On Its Own Ashes They Rebuilt Vancouver

no money to pay them. Only official overlooked was the poundkeeper.

The day after the fire the council was to meet in a tent, erected in five minutes by alderman L. A. Hamilton. "I got a can of paint and a paint brush, and we labelled it 'City Hall,'" said the alderman.

Vancouver was formerly known as the Village of Granville, named after His Excellency Earl Granville, Secretary of State. It comprised a 20-acre clearing cut out of the forest and stood on a narrow neck of low land which separated False Creek from Burrard Inlet. The settlement consisted of a few rows of white-washed buildings, erected—regardless of property lines—in the 1870s and 1880s. Included were two churches, two hotels, half a dozen saloons, general store, Chinese wash-house and a small dance hall. Buildings were all lit with kerosene lamps. At the time of the fire the population numbered approximately 600.

The only official, Provincial Government agent and constable Jonathan Miller, lived in a tiny cottage dubbed the "Court House" because at long intervals court was held in his small dining room. Behind it was a log jail with two cells, but no locks on the cell doors. Miller did not want prisoners. He was not lazy, but getting breakfast for drunken men was too much work for the only policeman between Granville and the North Pole. Practical and kind, Miller put them in a bunk, to sleep, to wake up and walk away.

Log floats, which grounded at low tide, provided wharfage for small steamers, sailboats and Indian canoes. There was neither post office nor school; those were half a mile away, down the beach near Hastings Sawmill (which escaped the fire).

Granville was a pretty place, peaceful, restful and framed in verdant green. It faced the snow-capped peaks, "Che-che-yoh-ee," the Twins, across the water, famous today as "The Lions." Its Squamish Indian name, "Luck-lucky," meant groves of trees. There were no streets, merely a few short stretches of plank or corduroy road, a few wooden sidewalks and some earth trails.

Deer browsed in the village, and the "tap, tap, tap," the noise made by their hooves on the wood planks could be heard throughout the night. There were bear and cougar in the surrounding forest, and there had been elk until the earliest settlers, Royal Engineers and Cariboo gold miners, lacking cattle for beef, killed them for meat.

Then, almost suddenly, in the fall of 1885, erstwhile Granville sprang to life. Surveyors began dividing—on paper—into oblong blocks and streets, the heavily wooded area, five miles long and two wide, immediately to the west. This was to be the CPR townsite. The residents of Granville and nearby Hastings Mill were a little bewildered and hoped these men with instruments knew what they were doing.

More interesting, old Granville assumed—unofficially—a new name, Vancouver, and a railway was coming. There was going to be a "big town," someday, perhaps, the greatest in Canada. It was staggering to think about.

"Hamilton! Hamilton! This is destined to be a great city, perhaps one of the greatest in Canada, and we must see to it that it has a name commensurate with its dignity and importance, and VANCOUVER it shall be if I have the ultimate decision"—Thus William Van Horne, general manager, Canadian Pacific Railway, 1884, to Lauchlan Alexander Hamilton, the company's land commissioner and chairman of the relief committee after the fire.

Hamilton was "Godfather to Vancouver" at its birth. He marked its place and named its streets, and it was he who erected Vancouver's first city hall—a tent, pitched in five minutes after the fire. As senior alderman of the first city council, he moved its first resolution: That the government defence reserve be acquired for park purposes (Stanley Park). Hamilton was made a Freeman of the City of Vancouver, 1938.

New settlers were arriving by boat from the south, for as yet the railroad had not reached the coast. Who were these people? Young men and women—there were no grey hairs in early Vancouver. They came full of hope, courage and eagerness; rejoicing in the good fortune which was theirs, to build a new city on Canada's western shore.

Sunday night, the embers of the first Vancouver were still smouldering. Monday saw the new yellow scantlings, a color harmonizing with a black desert. "Take what you need," offered the Hastings Sawmill, and opened its yards to all.

Historic Granville, alias "Gastown," had vanished. Nothing remained save indomitable men and courageous women. Out of the black dust there arose in the short span of a single life—and like a magic thing—a great world port and a great metropolis, of beauty and culture; of monumental edifices, luxurious office buildings, beautiful residences and green lawns, the happy home of an enlightened and benevolent people of peace and goodwill. There is not in all history, regardless of time or place, a more splendid page of human achievement.

What rebuilt Vancouver? one of the city's first aldermen was asked.

and mouth presented, to deepen into seriousness akin to melancholy.

"Douglas was possessor of a cold, proud egoism—he was hard, presenting a moral outline of stony rigidity, one who thought much of himself; Douglas venerated the institutions under which he was born, the conventionalities under which he lived, and thence proceeding, soon learned to venerate himself, which important figure he never for a moment lost sight of."

John Tod: "... was not a handsome man, neither was he learned, nor polished, nor to any considerable extent durably refined or re-modeled by civilization. Tall, bony and wiry; when in the administration of fur-trading justice his right arm was driven down from the shoulder by righteous wrath and with spasmodic force and the red nobles of his suzerainty fell before it like ten pins.

"Upon a small neck rising from sloping shoulders was set a head narrow and high, which half a century of constant exposure to the rigors of a New Caledonia climate had warped a little and made otherwise awry. The light brown hair was not long, falling over the shoulders in carefully greased waves or curls, so commonly seen among the free trappers on frontiers; nor was it short like a prize fighter's; it was of medium length, somewhat stiff, in places matted, and on the whole tolerably well-kept in dishevelled Hudson's Bay order.

"Above a broad, straight Scotch nose and high cheek-bones were glittering grey eyes, which flashed perpetual fun and intelligence. And the mouth! Support me, O my muse! What an opening for gin and eloquence...

"Although among earth's pretty ones, among the starched and venerated of broadways and boulevards, his angular contour and disjointed gait presented anything but an imposing appearance, yet John Tod was built a man from the ground upward, and those with eyes might see in him a king, aye, every inch a king."

The photographic montage on the jacket displays a blindfolded white face superimposed on a grimly determined black face. It illustrates graphically the theme of the book—the mounting danger of further delay in granting Negroes their civil rights.

The aim of this frightening little "autobiographical polemic" could hardly have been put more succinctly. William Stringfellow is a white Protestant lawyer from New England, a graduate of Harvard Law School, who chose to do legal work for the Episcopal Church in New York's Harlem instead of comfortably joining a law firm in Boston. For seven years he has lived and worked among Harlem's Negroes. They have accepted him, and he knows, as few white men do, how they feel about their present situation.

His pitiful, passionate book will open the eyes of white readers. Not Southerners—for its pages do not dwell on Southern conditions—but Northerners, and New Yorkers in particular. The gravamen of his charge is that by and large white Northerners don't really care about Negroes, that the Harlems of the North are ghettos with wretched housing, inferior schooling, and depressed economies.

Till now, contends Stringfellow, the Negro has accepted this, albeit reluctantly. But he is no longer willing to do so. There is a powerful passion for revenge brewing in the black ghettos of the North. Younger militants among the Negroes are urging direct action against the whites.

Stringfellow has come in direct contact with these black radicals and knows whereof he speaks. He cites movements like the Black Muslims (which, fortunately, most Negroes reject because it requires them to abandon Christianity) and the ominous appearance of anti-Semitism among Negroes. Since the book was written these words have already been substantiated in New York. Negroes recently rioted against Jews in Brooklyn, and New York police have uncovered the existence of a gang of young Negroes, 400 strong, pledged to assault whites.

Knowing all this, Stringfellow is alarmed. "Each day of denard inifference of white people in the North, of dehard segregation in the South," he warns, "invites disaster by making it more difficult for the Negro leadership favoring and practicing non-violent protest to maintain its leadership."

Those who have seen or read James Baldwin's new play, "Blues for Mister Charlie," were probably shocked by its display of naked hatred for whites. Stringfellow, writing independently, corroborates this. "The fact is, bluntly, that most Negroes hate white people," he says flatly. Their contempt, he adds, has even reached the point where Harlem prostitutes now refuse to receive white men, no matter what the price, because to associate with whites is to show disloyalty to their cause.

Brief as it is, this book is an urgent appeal for sanity while yet there is time. It is not an essay in scare propaganda or headline journalism. It is a plea to which attention must be paid.

MEMOIRS of an EXPLORER

VILHJALMUR STEFANSSON was the last of a special breed of Polar explorers, the latter-day Vikings who numbered such giants as Roald Amundsen, Fridtjof Nansen, and Stefansson himself. When he died two years ago at the age of 82, he could look back over a lifetime spent in tracking those Arctic wastes which are now so comfortably traversed above and below the ice.

You have only to look at Stefansson's photograph in his book to see the kind of man he was: his weather-beaten countenance looks as though it had been carved out of granite. This book is Stefansson's autobiography, completed just before his death. Some readers may consider it old-fashioned in that it begins with his birth and continues to the time he lays down his pen in old age. In his last chapter, indeed, he contemplates his end with characteristic equanimity. For that very reason, however, it will commend itself to other readers weary of those glossy, ghost-written memoirs denuded of all distinctiveness. Stefansson's rugged character is stamped indelibly on every forthright page of his book.

"Stef," as he was known to his many friends, came of an Icelandic family which emigrated to the Canadian prairies in the eighties in search of a warm climate. What they found in Winnipeg steered the boy for his career in Arctic exploration. He won a degree at the University of Iowa and headed for Harvard to take divinity, only to switch instead to anthropology. Years later he unlearned in the Arctic some of what he had acquired in the lecture rooms.

In his lifetime Stefansson wrote over a score of books on his Arctic explorations. He synthesizes them all in this last volume, reliving his exploits, renewing his excitements, and recalling his friendships with his great contemporaries. (Orville Wright was a good friend.)

The result is a delectable book which naturally takes its place among the classics of modern exploration. Stefansson looks back nostalgically to some of the violent controversies which engulfed him in his youth. The hottest of these was his discovery of a race of blond Eskimos on Victoria Island in the Canadian Arctic. The newspapers credited him with the theory that these Eskimos were descended from Vikings who had stumbled on North America long before Columbus. In vain "Stef" disclaimed ownership of this romantic notion. Amundsen and Nansen both ridiculed him for it, which hurt.

In actual fact Stefansson probably knew more about the Arctic than any other man of his time. It was he who suggested that, far from being a barren waste, it harbored life and resources, both of which assertions turned out to be true. His book is rich, too, in the wisdom of the North. Note, for example, how the Eskimos catch seals, a fascinating psychological process; or how whales break through the ice-cap to breathe, a method submarines duplicate today.

"Stef's" collection of writings on the Arctic, the largest of its kind in existence, is now housed at Dartmouth College, where he spent the last years of his life. This posthumous autobiography will make a shining ornament in that collection.—J.R.

HARRY J. BOYLE

Change of Pace

Most of those who admire Harry Boyle's two collections of boyhood reminiscence, Mentally in Clover and Home-brew and Patches, will be grateful for his first novel, A Summer Burning.

There will be a few—and I can name some of them—who will think he has sullied his pure flour by bringing in sex and all that. Also, he may burn a few hearts by giving a sympathetic account of rural Catholicism.

Having got that rubbish out of the way, what about the book?

With clarity Mr. Boyle evokes the youth of a 15-year-old farm boy who has accepted without question the gentle but limiting morality of his parents, his church, and his community. He takes an innocent pleasure in the relics of his boyhood and in the playworld which is just threatening to become serious.

A SUMMER BURNING, by Harry J. Boyle; Doubleday; $4.95.

It does become serious when a visitor comes to stay for the summer, a city-spawned half-breed with memories only of distrust and cruel self-seeking. Cunning beyond his abilities as well as beyond his years, the city boy changes the country boy, not by corrupting him but by making him question his moral assumptions.

The change comes through minor violence, sexual awakening, storm and death, and finally through the boy's first true vision of what his village folk are like, when they hibe and buzz around a touch of scandal.

The resolution is perhaps over-prepared, and it leads Mr. Boyle into two variations in tone, one successful, the other not. —J.R.

NEW POLITICAL THRILLER ON EVE OF U.S. ELECTION

Perhaps all I need to say is that Convention is by the authors of Seven Days in May. That recommendation, and the timeliness of the subject should ensure its success.

With the American elections coming in November, and the conventions to select presidential candidates coming in the steaming summer months, there must be as few Canadians uninterested in a novel like this as there are Americans who would be interested in one about our own political stew.

Convention delivers exactly what it promises; a view from just off-centre of the back-room intrigue and front-running behavior of the American political animal.

This species, unknown in its pure form outside the continental United States, is closely allied to some other species in the most unlikely countries. The strength of commitment to those ludicrous party emblems, the donkey and the elephant, can be compared only to that displayed by children battling over the respective merits of the bread they eat, the street they live on—or their parents' political affiliations.

CONVENTION by Fletcher Knebel and Charles W. Bailey; Longmans; $5.95.

Review by
PETER WORTHINGTON

A curious hierarchy of values is well illustrated by Knebel and Bailey in this book: the lowest level of political allegiance is to one's own candidate within the party; then, to the party; finally, to the United States. Noble and dirty battles are fought on the first level, with nothing but complete disaster foreseen if the other man is selected.

When the other man is selected, as he often is, the certain disaster is forgotten—or rather, it is transferred, for if the other party is elected, the mechanism of creation will be threatened; the acid of treason will poison the wells of national faith.

Of course, when the other party is elected, this final catastrophe is postponed (to be forecast again in four years), and all rally round the final point of allegiance, the Country of Our Forefathers. If it should ever lose . . . well, let's not talk about that.

In short, I find this kind of commitment, which mistakes politics for the whole of life, unsettling. There are allegiances beyond national ones that matter more, and matter more and more.

Convention raises these questions only obliquely; it is a political thriller, and it held me by its tension and suspense. The person at the centre of the novel (not the centre of the convention) has enough character to create a minimal involvement without distracting attention from the main arena; the minor characters are deftly drawn; the issues are carefully chosen; the contestants cannot be identified (the novel is set in the future, but not really); the scene shifts quickly.

That is, it will make a good movie, and a pretty good play—a musical I don't see, but somebody will—and as a novel it gets my primary vote.

NEW BOOKS and AUTHORS

JOHN MORGAN GRAY UBC MEDAL WINNER

The current issue of Canadian Literature (No. 26) announces that the 1963 University of British Columbia Medal for popular biography has been awarded to John Morgan Gray for his biography of the 5th Earl of Selkirk, Lord Selkirk of Red River.

The book is a new understanding of the founder of the Red River Settlement, and a particular clarification of Lord Selkirk's legal battle with the North West Company.

Published in October of last year, Lord Selkirk of Red River was warmly received by public and critics in Canada and the U.K. The U.S. edition will be published shortly by Michigan State University Press.

Previous Macmillan of Canada winners of the UBC Medal have been Donald Creighton, for his life of Sir John A. Macdonald; and J. M. S. Careless for the first volume of his recently-completed biography of George Brown.

The medal is an award initiated by UBC President Norman McKenzie. It is now administered by the University's quarterly, Canadian Literature.

New Honors for Sheila

Sheila Burnford's The Incredible Journey, published by Little, Brown and Co. in 1961, has been selected for the 1964 Young Reader's Choice Award by popular vote of the children of Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho and British Columbia.

The award, a hand-printed parchment scroll, is presented annually by the Division of Work with Children and Young People of the Northwest Library Association.

The first winner of the award in 1940 was Dell McCormick's Paul Bunyan Swings His Axe. Other winners have included Mr. Popper's Penguins, King of the Wind, Lasso Come Home, House Price, and Old Yeller.

Mrs. Burnford, who was born in Scotland, now lives in Port Arthur, Ontario. The Incredible Journey has also received the Aureole Award, the Dorothy Canfield Fisher Award, and the Canadian Book of the Year Medal.

Worrying Problem

POPULATION EXPLOSION

A Review by JOHN ROBSON

One of my problems these days is that I have so much worrying to do, I hardly have any time to read.

And when I do read, the chances are I'll just learn something else to worry about. And this book on human fertility and population problems was one of those chances.

Last year in Boston the American Academy of Arts and Sciences with the support of the Ford Foundation sponsored a seminar on population increase. The papers and discussions at this seminar have now been published—Human Fertility and Population Problems, ed. Roy O. Greep.

The papers were not designed for the layman; they are highly technical discussions of particular problems or aspects of research by and for experts. But nonetheless a lot of the information and conclusions are of great interest to the layman and quite appalling.

When I'd finished I didn't even know where to begin worrying.

I could begin at home. Dr. C. R. Garcia's paper dealt with human fertility control and the one thing of which I became convinced was that I'm never safe from inadvertently contributing to the population explosion. That's one statistic I don't want to become.

Or I could begin in the kitchen. Dr. Hudson Hoagland in his paper mentions that one result of overpopulation among mammals such as rodents, lions and primitive man Co. Inc.). $2.95.

man is cannibalism. Man appears pretty primitive to me a good bit of the time.

Or I could worry while walking down the street. At the last count, our block contained 16 preschool children and innumerable older brothers and sisters.

Rats under similar conditions of crowding showed a variety of neurotic disturbances which made very depressing reading. The paper pointed out that these findings were applicable to human beings.

In India, where I worried next, the population will double in the next 25 years if the birth and death rates remain unaltered. That's 900,000,000 Indians by 1982.

And the Indians aren't alone. The final statistic for me was based on a continuance of the overall two per cent increase in the world population.

Six hundred years from now our descendants will each have one square yard of the earth's entire land area—that's counting the Sahara and the Himalayas. And then try to get away from it all!

The Beatles are Big Brothers to THE OXFAM EFFORT

It's 22 years since the unusually-titled organisation of Oxfam began to operate. Now it has reached these Pacific shores.

In recent weeks in Victoria you may have noticed little collection cans around the city—in shops, supermarkets, on gas station counters, in the local barber-shop. Pictured upon them is an emaciated, skeletal child holding an empty bowl like a modern-day Oliver Twist. That's the essence of Oxfam.

Oxfam derives its name from the place where it was founded—Oxford, England—and from the name of one of its greatest enemies, famine.

Non-political and non-denominational, Oxfam's aim is to help the distressed, underfed and underprivileged people of the world without fear or favor, pride or prejudice.

Recently, Mrs. Lynn ten Kate, Canadian executive secretary of Oxfam, sent to Canada early this year to get things moving, visited Victoria and helped form a local branch of the organization.

Oxfam's eyes are closed to creed and color. But they are open to starvation, catastrophe and human suffering.

The Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, to give it its early, full title, was founded in 1942 by a group of Oxford dons, clergy and businessmen. Their primary object was to send help to starving children in occupied Greece. They raised and sent about $10,200.

Since that time, Oxfam's grants for overseas aid has leaped from $519,000 in 1958-59 to $3,144,000 in 1961-62 and more than $4,500,000 in 1962-63.

Oxfam's director is 53-year-old Leslie Kirkley of Manchester, who was appointed in 1951. The organization survived after the Second World War, while many of its similar contemporaries dissolved.

It asserted its non-biased outlook almost immediately by offering aid to Germany. But for many years after the war, nine-tenths of the committee's aid was in the form of second-hand clothing.

As newer emergencies occurred—Korea, Hong Kong, Hungary and Algeria—Oxfam's cash grants rocketed to around $240,000 a year, plus $720,000 worth—628 tons—of clothing.

In 1959 Oxfam registered as a non-profit-making company. Its objects were cited as: "to carry on work for the relief of suffering arising out of famine, earthquake, pestilence, war, or any other large-scale emergency, or due to the inadequacy of groups, of national social or economic resources in any part of the world."

THESE LITTLE PEOPLE are refugees from the Communist Chinese invaders of Tibet, sheltering at an Oxfam nursery in Dharamsala, northern India.

Last year, Oxfam helped its 80th new country. And today, its former material aids are supplemented by a more practical approach. Not only does Oxfam seek to help people, but helps by teaching them to help themselves.

Why do people work for Oxfam? There are many answers. Like that of Mrs. Gladys Donnithorne, wife of a Hong Kong missionary. When she saw an 81-year-old woman sitting in the pouring rain on a bamboo mat she asked: "Why don't you go home?"

"This is my home," said the woman. Like that of Mrs. ten Kate, who retired from business in the engineering industry in Britain to work for Oxfam. "It was guilty conscience," she admits. "I had everything I needed, but I realized there were people a lot worse off than me and I decided I had to do something to help them."

Less than one cent for every 12 is spent on administrative expenses from Oxfam's income. One-third of all Britain's schools actively support its cause.

Last year grants totalling $75,000 were made for the victims of the cyclone in Chittagong and Pakistan.

In England, a myriad different independent organizations work to help Oxfam. Many give special parties at which a nominal fee is charged. Guests have a simple meal of cheese, bread and water as a symbolic gesture of genuine desire to help starving people.

Another idea which has caught on in England, is one in which a family goes without one meal a week—and gives the cost of that meal to Oxfam.

Latest supporters of Oxfam in Britain are The Beatles. Last Christmas they raised more than $1,500,000 for Oxfam with charity performances.

SPOTLIGHT on HANDCRAFTS

The glass rods, imported from Italy, come in all colors. Sometimes she uses these, sometimes she uses plain, colorless rods, and dips her needle in powdered glass of different colors, of which she has scores of jars.

If she wants a large flat bead, the molten ball is pressed between two moulds on the ends of an instrument like a pair of pliers. The finished job is thrust into a small container of special ashes to cool, and to get it free from the wire needle it is left for 24 hours in a solution of nitric acid. This dissolves the copper completely, and leaves the bead with the hole by which it can be threaded into necklace, earring or bracelet.

Mrs. Cicogna's little home factory is in her basement, part of which has been fitted up as an attractive and business-like showroom for her work. On tiered tables, displayed with driftwood on beds of white chipped rock, some 150 sets of jewelry in every imaginable shade and shape are set out under spotlights.

Long years ago, when the Willows annual fair was one of the highlights of my childhood years, I remember the glass-blowers who piled their trade in one of the big buildings and who seemed to me nothing short of magicians. And once I was given a beautiful glass peacock, which was my pride and joy for years. The other day, Mrs. Cicogna, having displayed her artistry—and made it look, as experts always do, so deceptively easy—took a jade green glass rod and in some three minutes fashioned from it a little duck about three-quarters of an inch long, to which she added yellow eyes and a yellow bill. And gave it to me.

So today, my one and only piece of Venetian glass (I think), the little duck sits, with the help of a smidgin of plasticine, on the edge of a bowl of flowers on my breakfast table. And I no longer regret the peacock, which went the way of all flesh and most glass a long time ago.
